What Is Coming?
A No-Plan Government
Why Not 100% Tax?
Goethe's Last Words

By Arthur Brisbane

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 23—The philosophical photographer from Frank B. Shutts' Miami Herald would tell you ordinarily that he has not been out of Florida for 10 years, would like to go to Wisconsin for just one first-class snowstorm, then come back to Florida.

Just now he is inclined to discuss things generally and asks, "What is it all coming to?"

The day's news in the Miami Herald and other papers make many ask, "What is it all coming to?" Freakish March tornadoes killed at least 300 persons in five Southern States Monday, according to the Associated Press. Scores are injured by mysterious "twisters" that cut off the side of a strong building as neatly as a giant knife could cut it.

That represents nature doing what she can to imitate men, organized for destruction.

News that stands next to the story of tornado destruction tells of plague, hunger and remorseless killing in Shanghai. Peasants are eating the bark of trees in their desperation.

In Ohio, labor troubles threaten.

But the most serious condition exists in the Congress of the United States, where some small-sized men, with no thought in their minds except RE-ELECTION, are willing to trade everything for votes.

They forget, in their feeble provincial imitation of real radicals, that they may trade themselves out of a job permanently.

The sort of thing that they are imitating, in Russia and elsewhere, does not hire half-baked incompetents at $10,000 a year each.

Just at present this big government, like a car off the track, is zig-zagging through space, not quite certain in what direction it is going.

When a boy makes a small stone skip on a pond, it matters little whether it turns left or right.

But it does when the greatest, richest country in the world imitates the skipping stone and pursues its career without a plan.

Our problem is lack of employment, and while feeble, futile efforts are made to solve that problem, fools invent a tax system that would discourage all enterprise and make lack of employment greater than ever.

Under our system, the individual may lead his life and pursue happiness in his own way, even when his happiness involves making more money than he needs.

In the course of his enterprises he employs other men, who in turn develop their ideas of happiness, and pursue their plans.

Let half-baked law-makers, in a competitive system such as ours, say to the individual, "You may initiate enterprises, accumulate profits, but we shall take the profits from you as fast as you get them." And enterprise will soon die.

What will the great minds of Congress tax, after that happens?

It should not be forgotten that things happen suddenly, and when they have happened it is not easy to undo them.

Our slump, for instance, came as suddenly as one of those "twisters" striking at the Southeastern territory, and as mysteriously.

But there are worse things than slumps. One of them is tampering and experimenting with a system of government, when you haven't prepared any substitute for that system.

For the safety of the many, their regular employment, and regular food, this country needs to continue along old fashioned lines, at least until it shall have developed material for some of the new fashioned lines.

We have not the submissive, docile population that would permit such operations as Stalin carries on in Russia, all obeying the crack of one lash, EVERYBODY TAXED 100 PER CENT ABOVE WHAT HE ACTUALLY EATS AND WEARS.

We have no signs of such power in one individual as Mussolini possesses.

And suppose we did develop such men, instead of our mush and milk type, there is something in the American people that would not take kindly to the statement "there has been too much prattle about liberty, too much nonsensical talk about freedom of the individual. Henceforth you listen to what I say, and OBEY."

The world remembers now the 100th anniversary of Goethe's death. And this country should remember especially the last words that Goethe uttered, "MEHR LICHT." "MORE LIGHT."

His eyes were closing, the light leaving them forever But

BULLETIN

Chicago, March 23 (AP)—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals refused today to listen again to Al Capone's appeal from his conviction for dodging Federal income taxes.

Trenton, N. J., March 23—Swift, secret action definitely to track the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby through Chicago sources was foreshadowed today through the mysterious injection of a wealthy and prominent Chicagoan into the case.

H. W. Caldwell, trustee of the board of education in Chicago, was to arrive in that city at 5:35 o'clock tonight after an eight-hour conference with Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh at their home near Hopewell, N. J.

There are many indications that the group Caldwell represents is the nation-wide underworld organization of Scarface Al Capone.

Linked to Capone Case

Caldwell himself refuses to affirm or deny it. But it is known he has conferred with Washington officials who were responsible for Capone's conviction on a charge of income tax evasion.

The story of Caldwell's conscription as an emissary is one of the strangest developments of this weird case.

A few days after the kidnaping he was with a party of friends in a restaurant on Chicago's North Side. The talk turned to the Lindbergh kidnaping.

"It's a downright shame," Caldwell remarked to a companion. "Several of my friends know Lindbergh very well and like him. They've offered to help in any way they can. If I knew any way I could be of assistance, I'd offer, too."

Early the next day Caldwell received a telephone call:

"Your conversation last evening was overheard," he was told.

"What conversation?" Caldwell asked.

"About Lindbergh," said the

OFFICER HURT; TO LOSE PAY

Patrolman John Price, one of the Chelsea officers due to go on the reserve list without pay in a few days, suffered a possible fracture of the spine today in a fall while chasing two youths he detected trying to break into a jewelry store.

Price fired four shots as he chased the youths through alleys in the vicinity of Broadway and Beacon st.

He tripped as he rounded a corner and fell heavily on his back.

Joseph Forbes, a taxi-driver, who had heard shots, found him unconscious and with the aid of a milkman took him to Chelsea Naval Hospital.

Recovering consciousness, the patrolman reported he had detected the youths prying a window at the rear of the Broadway Jewelry Store, 91 Broadway. They dropped a chisel and jimmy as he approached.

Price is a war veteran and was for several years a member of the Chelsea fire department. He asked for and obtained a transfer to the police only a short time ago.

Lomasney Hints at Land Grab

'ASK INNES!' HE CRIES AT HEARING

Bitter Fight Looms on Curley Bill to Borrow $4,500,000 for Tube Approaches

Martin Lomasney caused a sensation at a legislative hearing today when he advised Rep. George P. Anderson to consult his friends, "Bob Bottomley and Charlie Innes," regarding the ownership of property the city may take in developing Haymarket sq.

The hearing was before the committee on municipal finance, chairmaned by Anderson, on Mayor Curley's bill seeking authorization for Boston to borrow $4,500,000 outside the debt limit for construction and improvements in the vicinity of the square.

The fiery West End "Mahatma," one of Boston's most colorful political figures, rose to comment upon the plan and Anderson asked him if he knew who owned any of the property that might be affected.

"THE ABC BOYS KNOW"

"Ask him who owns it!" Continuing, to the chairman, he said: "Ask your friend Bob Bottomley who owns it. Ask your friend Charlie Innis who owns it, and who has owned it for a long time. The ABC boys own it!"

Anderson laughed and Lomasney did not further explain.

The West End leaded said he neither favored nor opposed the bill, but that "those who oppose it are as short-sighted today as they were years ago.

He said he proposed similar development of Haymarket sq. in 1897 when the work would have cost only $1,000,000.

Joint committees of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Real Estate Exchange were expected to present opposition to certain features of the plan.

FOR TUBE ENTRANCES

Boston seeks the money for construction necessary to open up the approaches to the $16,000,000 vehicular tunnel now under construction and scheduled to be finished two weeks hence.

Enlargement and widening of Haymarket sq., construction of a new street from Hanover to Merrimack and Portland and reconstruction of two blocks in Causeway st., near North Station, are contemplated.

A. B. Casson, legislative counsel for the city, said the work was absolutely necessary if the harbor tunnel is to serve its purpose. The improvements should be begun now he said.

Fred H. Fay, chairman of the Boston planning board, presented maps and drawings of the changes planned.

The present island in Haymarket sq. would be enlarged and a circle smillar to that in Charles st., with a pedestrian underpass, would be built, so there would be no cross-traffic and no interruption of traffic.

SEVEN GIRLS ARE FELLED BY FUMES

150 Are Affected by Leaking Pipes in Candy Factory in Sears St.

Ammonia fumes sent seven girls to the hospital and 150 other workers fleeing from the candy factory of Edgar P. Lewis & Sons, Inc., 7 Sears st., today.

A valve on a machine in the basement broke a few minutes after the factory had filled with employes, mostly women and girls, and the fumes, seeping through the five-story plant, caused a panic.

None of the victims was seriously affected. Two, Esther Parietori, 18, of Main st., Everett, and Gay Quatrone, 20, of Bennington st., East Boston, were carried from the second floor by Traffic Sergeant Thomas F. Harvey.

Others requiring hospital treatment were Philomena Puopolo, 19, Endicott st.; Rose de Leo, 20, North st., both North End; Jennie Chiumenti, 18, Brooks st., Somerville; Louise Bontin, 23, River rd., Winthrop, and Mrs. Geneva Fama, 24, Main st., Everett.

A fire rescue squad, wearing gas masks, shut off the machine and aired the building. The fumes reaching the street were not strong. Albert Newman, engineer of the plant, said a leaking valve caused the trouble.

ITALIANS RAP AT SMITH SLATE

Failure of the men who drew up the Smith slate of delegates-at-large and alternates to include any of Italian descent drew the fire of Mayor Curley and other speakers today at the Roosevelt Forum meeting.

There was an overflow crowd as on the first two days and a crowd of several hundred stood outside listening to the addresses through the amplifiers.

Mayor Curley made a plea "to liberals and independents of the state, who want to avoid a convention deadlock and four more years of Hoover rule."

"The Italian people are emotionally idealistic and Franklin D. Roosevelt portrays those ideals," said Joseph A. Tomasello. "He is a champion of the people."

Dr. Joseph A. Santosuosso declared:

"Whatever prompted the chairman of the Democratic State Committee to ignore the Italians of Massachusetts in selection of a slate of delegates-at-large constitutes in the opinion of the Italian citizenship of Massachusetts a degrading insult.

"We, as Italian citizens, resent the action as an insult to an element of the population of Massachusetts that was 100 per cent loyal to Alfred E. Smith in 1928."

Pawnbroker, 65, Peeved at Third Holdup, Turns Tables

Michael Rosenthal is getting awfully tired of this sort of thing so tired, in fact, that he chased an alleged holdup man all over East Boston today until the man, 30 years Rosenthal's junior, was captured.

It made Rosenthal, an East Boston pawnbroker, very angry when a man walked into the shop at 27 Border st. and slugged the pawnbroker on the head with a quart bottle filled with sand and the whole encased in a stocking.

So angry was the 65-year-old pawnbroker that he picked himself up off the floor and belted the assailant on the jaw with a hard fist and then set out in pursuit when the assailant ran.

The chase led through Border st., Cross st., New st. to Sumner st., where two coast guards in front of Base 5, hearing the fast-stepping pursuer's cries for help, seized a man who gave his name as Charles O'Brien, 35, of Neponset ave., Dorchester. He was arrested on a charge of assault with intent to rob.

What makes Rosenthal weary about the whole business is that only last November three youths entered his pawnshop and laid blackjacks on his scalp, inflicting wounds that required 37 stitches.

And in January of 1924 Rosenthal, who then was a stripling of but 57 years, was compelled to take a revolver away from a holdup man in his shop after the holdup man had rapped the Rosenthal head with the butt of the gun.

In the November holdup attempt the trio, two of them former coast guards and the other a discharged Navy sailor, were captured, but the bandit in 1924 got away.

ALE UNLOADED NEAR POLICE

While a policeman stood 20 feet away four men unloaded cartons of Canadian ale from an automobile in Canal st., and another carried them into a nearby building, it was revealed by a dry agent in Federal court today.

A dry agent approached and made known his identity, with the result that three of the men fled. A man giving the name of Donald McCormick of Baldwin st., Cambridge, was arrested.

Commissioner Jenney was ready to go on with the case, but John J. Crehan, counsel for McCormick, got a continuance until tomorrow, at which time a plea of not guilty will be entered and bail set.

McCormick was allowed to go on $1000 security.

BRITAIN TO INSIST ON IRISH OATH TO KING

Land Annuities Also Must Be Paid by Free State, Thomas Says in Commons Speech

London, March 23 (AP)—Great Britain is determined that Ireland shall neither abolish the oath of allegiance to the British crown nor discontinue payment f othe Irish land annuities, J. H. Thomas, secretary for dominions, told the House of Commons today.

To that end the Government has sent a communication to the Free State Government which will make the British standpoint "clear beyond the possibility of a doubt," Thomas said.

Eamon De Valera, new Free State president, informed London officially yesterday that he intends to abolish the oath, and although there has been no official communication regarding the land annuities, his public statements during and since the recent Irish election made it clear he intends to discontinue their payment to England.

"TREATY IS BINDING"

The British Government, said Mr. Thomas, considers the Free State is bound by the most ormal and explicit understanding to continue paying these annuities to the national debt commissioners.

Failure to pay, he asserted, 'will be a manifest violation of an agreement which is binding in law and in honor on the Irish Free State, whatever administration may be in power, in exactly the same way as the treaty itself is binding on both countries."

WARNS AGAINST "PANIC"

Mr. Thomas did not give the text of the British reply sent to Dublin, but he assured some opposition questioners that it would be made public in due time.

This is not time for panic, he told the House, "but the matter is serious, and the best way to deal with it is not by debate in the Commons."

Pressed for details, he said he had no intention of going into them.

"My answer is clear and explicit," he declared, "the annuities are a bargain between two peoples hitherto honorably kept, and we intend that the agreement shall stand."

"MEANS WAR' SAYS BUCHANAN

The Labor member, George Buchanan, of Glasgow, exclaimed:

"Is that a declaration of war

IRELAND IN QUANDARY OVER DE VALERA'S POLICY

COSGRAVE SEES DANGEROUS SITUATION

Ulster Loyal to Britain; Spurns the Proposal for Union With Free State

Copyright, 1932, International News Service

Dublin, March 23 (INS)—All Ireland is agog over the latest attempt of Eamonn De Valera, President of the Irish Free State Executive Council, to twist the Lion's tail.

His assertion that the Irish Free State government intends to exercise its "legal, constitutional right" by abolishing the oath of allegiance to King George and withholding the land annuities, is the sole topic of conversation throughout Ireland.

Beneath the surface is a portentous rumbling which adds to the gravity of an already serious situation.

CONSEQUENCES FEARED

Now that De Valera has ceased to talk and commenced to act, the people are faced with reality. And many of them are appalled at the possible consequences.

It could hardly be said that De Valera's virtual ultimatum to Westminster was anything in the nature of a surprise. Abrogation of the oath of allegiance to the British Crown was a slogan in De Valera's election campaign.

He played upon the independent spirit of the Irish people, battered remorsely at the bonds tying the Emerald Isle to England and envisaged a new Ireland free from the trammels of subjugation and tradition.

ULTIMATUM TO LONDON

But election talk and official acts are different things. Doubtless there were many in Ireland who believed De Valera was talking more for internal than external consumption, and many others, who although agreeing with the new President's policies, believed he would not dare to put them into effect with the small majority he controls in the Dail.

But his ultimatum, delivered to London through the medium of Irish Free State High Commissioner W. J. Dulanty, left no room for doubt. And the paramount question in the public mind is:

"What will England do?"

"SERIOUS" SAYS COSGRAVE

In a brief conversation with International News Service this afternoon, former President William T. Cosgrave declined to commit himself "for the present."

"A serious dispute between two governments has arisen," he said. "You can surely realize it would be unseemly for me to discuss the question at this critical moment."

Asked what he thought might happen, he replied:

"Anything."

The consequences of De Valera's move cannot be foretold. In some quarters there is a growing conviction that Ireland is on the verge of another internecine war.

With the press almost unanimous in advising caution, Ireland is awaiting the next move by Britain. Meantime, two questions are being asked:

ULSTER REMAINS LOYAL.

Will the MacDonald government bring the Irish Free State government to heel by carrying out Lloyd George's threat of an "immediate and terrible war" made 10 years ago?

Will British Dominions Secretary J. H. Thomas be instructed to inform De Valera that Britain desires to settle the issue by friendly discussion?

The Special Ulster constabulary organization is being revived to protect border territory during Easter week, when nationalistic feeling in the Free State is expected to reach its height.

LOYAL TO BRITAIN

Official spokesmen for the Ulster government were quick to reaffirm this territory's allegiance to the British crown and promised a united front against Eamon de Valera's proposal to unite Ulster and the Irish Free State independent of British rule.

Many Ulster observers regarded De Valera's unification plan in the light of mere political propaganda, holding that such a suggestion was beyond possibility.

CELEBRATIONS BANNED

To prevent disorders during Easter week, the Ulster government has banned Republican celebrations entirely.

"They commemorate one of the most treacherous and bloody revolutions in history," said Sir Richard Bates, home minister.

The Irish Republican army factions in Ulster are resentful over the ban, however, necessitating special police precautions to prevent illegal meetings at Newry and other hotbeds of Republican sentiment.

Brockton Plea for Loan Is Unheeded

Brockton, March 23—For the third time in as many weeks City Treasurer Calvin R. Barrett is having trouble in trying to borrow money to carry on the city's business. Asking for bids yesterday on a $300,000 loan, Treasurer Barrett received none.

The city has enough to carry on for some days yet and by that time Treasurer Barrett hopes to be able to float the loan.

by the right honorable gentlemaSn?"

There were loud cries of protest from the ministerial benches.

"It is a declaration of war, a declaration of war for £3,000,000."

Another Scottish Labor member, James Maxton, wanted to know if the Irish nation was not going to be treated as well as foreign nations with whom Great Britain was negotiating regarding the revision of treaties.

DULANTY 'PHONES DUBLIN

Thomas made no direct reply but begged the members of the House to say nothing in debate which might embitter the situation. He concluded:

"But equally I must make it clear to this House and to the country that the statement I have read leaves no shadow of doubt on two points, namely, the oath and the annuities. This is the considered judgment of the government and that is where we stand in the matter."

J. W. Dulanty, Irish high commissioner in London, listened to Mr. Thomas' statement from the gallery of the House of Commons. Immediately after Mr. Thomas finished Dulanty telephoned to Dublin.

KIDNAP SUSPECT IS EX-CONVICT

New Brunswick, N. J., March 23 (AP)—Prosecutor Douglas M. Hicks announced today that George Malden, arrested after an attempt was made to enter the home of J. Seward Johnson, wealthy manufacturer, has admitted he is Richard Cowan who escaped from the new Western Penitentiary in 1931.

Records in the New York Police Department and the Department of Justice show Cowan was arrested in Newcastle, Pa., in 1928 on a charge of breaking and entering and was sentenced from 8 to 16 years. He escaped prison by climbing over the brick wall.

WAR CLOUD IS HOVERING OVER SHANGHAI

Japs Claim Chinese Troops Are Re-entering the 12½-Mile Zone in Defiance of Pact

Shanghai, March 23 (AP)—War clouds again lowered over Shanghai late this afternoon as Japanese army officials announced they were preparing to take strong measures to block a reported re-entry into the 12½-mile zone by Chinese troops.

The Japanese said they were informed the Chinese had crossed Soochow creek at Chinawangmiao, within the zone of evacuation described in Gen. Uyeda's ultimatum of February 20.

Japanese officials asked British consular authorities to request the Chinese to withdraw south of the creek. A spokesman said the Chinese were digging themselves in on the north side of the stream, opposite the Japanese lines, with the apparent intention of remaining.

QUITS IN DISGUST.

The situation was deepened by the failure of the Nanking government to appoint a military delegate to the peace parleys to replace Gen. Chiang Kuang-Nai, who walked out of the conference this morning, complaining that the Japanese had sent Gen. Uyeda, who was only a lieutenant-general and beneath his rank.

The prospect tonight was that the parleys would be delayed at least until Thursday.

American official participation in the administration of the International Settlement, where American property interests are steadily increasing, has been lessened as a result of a two-day election to choose a new municipal council.

The American representation on the council has dropped from two to one. Joseph W. Carney, American oil man, failed of re-election. The other American on the council, who was re-elected, is Frank J. Raven, banker and real estate operator.

The council now consists of five British, five Chinese, two Japanese, one American and one Dane. The foreign taxpayers in the settlement elect the councilmen.

The statistical department of the Chinese National government in Nanking announced that the losses to provincial governments in Manchuria as a result of the Japanese military action there amounts to approximately 2,000,000,000 Mexican dollars, equal to about $500,000,000 in gold.

Changchun, Manchuria, March 23 (AP)—A new battle, in which five Japanese and 42 Chinese were killed, broke out today in the widespread revolt in Kirin Province against the new Manchurian State.

It was the fourth encounter in 24 hours and occurred in Taochiatun, 35 miles southwest of here on the South Manchurian Railway.

Lindbergh to Sell Estate

New York, March 23 (AP)—The Daily News says Col. Charles Lindbergh plans to sell the Sourland estate near Hopewell, N. J., as soon as his kidnaped baby is recovered or hope is definitely abandoned.

The place was purchased for its seclusion. Since the kidnaping it has become a center of interest.

voice on the wire. "You said you had friends who knew Lindbergh. If they can get you in touch with him, you may be able to help more than you thought last night."

A meeting followed. The politician was told the abductors would deal only with federal secret service agents or himself. He accepted the mission.

AT LINDBERGH'S TWICE

Last Thursday morning Caldwell arrived in Trenton and went immediately to the office of Governor A. Harry Moore. After a conference there, he spent the remainder of the day at the Lindbergh home and returned to Chicago that night.

He was back in Trenton again Monday, saw Governor Moore once more and made a second trip to Hopewell. On Monday evening he made a hurried trip to New York.

Caldwell today again refused also to confirm that he had reason to believe the kidnaped child was held by members of Al Capone's gang. Capone, king of racketeers, from a jail cell recently offered to engage in a search for the stolen infant if he were freed on bail to permit this activity.

"CRITICAL SITUATION"

Reticent about his purpose, Caldwell nevertheless was reported to have hopes he could establish direct or indirect but immediate contact with the abductors because of clues that suddenly came into his possession.

"All I can say is that I possessed such information I believed would be of value," he said before entraining here last night for his home.

"I presented it to Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh, to Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf and to Governor Harry A. Moore.

"The situation is extremely critical and I desire to give every possible assistance."

Previously he told newspapermen he regarded his information as "the best yet," and declared he was not working on it alone.

THREE CONFERENCES

Caldwell specifically denied reports he acted in behalf of Chicago's "Secret Six," the organization formed to combat crime in Chicago, and which is known to have investigated certain promising appearing clues in the Lindbergh abduction.

Caldwell's latest conference with Lindbergh was the third in five days.

A former president of the board of education in Chicago, a war-time naval air pilot, now active in business and politics in his home city, Caldwell visited the governor and the famous flier first last Thursday.

He rushed back to Chicago the same night, returning quietly last Monday and again laying information before Lindbergh and the authorities.

It was reported Lindbergh reposed full confidence in whatever disclosures Caldwell made to him.

At least once this week Caldwell visited New York.

POOH, POOH, AS USUAL

"This information has been checked and found to be of no importance to this investigation. Any further information he may have is to be similarly checked and investigated."

Observers felt, however, that it must have been a startlingly important lead which Caldwell obtained to cause him to drop his manifold interests hastily and undertake the journey here with its ramified tasks.

From the Lindbergh estate came reports today, the 22nd since the child was abducted from his crib in his nursery, that both Col. Lindbergh and his wife, the former Anne Morrow, were well and absolutely unshaken in their faith their golden-haired, blue-eyed baby will be returned to them.

FIND LADDER CLUES

Samples of writing, letterheads, pieces of lumber and a tool chest, found in an apparently deserted bungalow and workshop on a hilltop five miles back of the Sourland Mountain home of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, were seized by investigators. The find was described by detectives as one of the most important leads uncovered since the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped three weeks ago.

All of the evidence was immediately taken to Col. Lindbergh's home for comparison with the original ransom note and with the ladder used by the kidnapers.

Who the latest occupants of the bungalow were was not known. The place was formerly either owned or leased by a man named Klein, police learned. The bungalow adjoins a farm owned by Edward Kutchera, a New York cabinet maker, whose shop is at 101 West 88th st.

WOOD SIMILAR TO LADDER

Detective Corp. William Leon of State Police and Detective Serg. Robert Coar of the Jersey City police, were the two investigators who walked more than a mile along a dirt road to the bungalow, which is a mile off the road between Zion and Neshanic.

One of the most important bits of evidence found in the garage, which was used as a workshop, was a long piece of round lumber, identical with the pegs used to pin the three sections of the portable ladder used by the kidnapers.

This round lumber was of coarse fibre, and in conjunction with other wood found on the place, provided the police with strong suspicion that the ladder might have been put together in the deserted workshop.

The ladder was made of yellow and white pine—yellow pine being used for the sides and white pine for the rungs. Wood of both descriptions, which at first glance appeared to be the same size as that used in making the ladder, was found either in the garage or vicinity.

The floor of the garage or workshop was covered with sawdust and shavings, indicating that carpenter work of some sort had been performed there recently.

Officially the police had "nothing new to report" today in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping mystery investigation which has entered its fourth week.

SHOP USED RECENTLY

The "news bulletin" issued today by Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police, was shorter than usual and entirely negative in character.

"No report has been received that the Lindbergh baby is being held on an island off the coast of Columbia near Buenta Ventura," the statement began.

In one sentence, Schwarzkopf dismissed the activities of H. Wallace Caldwell, who has been in conference with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh on what he (Caldwell) regarded as "important information."

"The information given by Mr. H. Wallace Caldwell has been carefully investigated and has no bearing of value to the Lindbergh case," said Schwarzkopf.

The statement then proceeded to eliminate another clue in these words:

"George Malden, robbery suspect, arrested by Chief McCarthy of South Plainfield, has no connection with the Lindbergh kidnaping case insofar as we have been able to determine."

Malden was arrested last Saturday after an unidentified man had attempted to get into the second floor nursery at the home of J. Seward Johnson wealthy surgical dressings manufacturer, at Highland Park, N. J. The intruder fled after an exchange of shots with the night watchman.

Schwarzkopf's statement concluded with a report on the "carrier pigeon" clues as follows:

"We have no proof one way or the other that the note found on the dead pigeon at East Stroudsburg, Pa., was a prank of a young boy. There is no significance attached to this note of any value to the solution of this case.

Concerning the note found on a pigeon at South Kent, Ct., we have nothing to report other than the fact that this report, unverified by pigeon or note, was received at this office."

Pigeon Identified

The dead carrier pigeon found last week in Litchfield County, Ct., bearing a note purporting to refer to the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, was identified today as the property of Simon Wayne Brooklyn, N. Y., by Henry Diamer national secretary of the American Racing Pigeon Union.

A tag found on the pigeon, along with the note, bore the identifying number "A U—30—S—3414." Diamer said this number had been issued to the Brooklyn resident.

Ralph Shenton, 331 State st., Schenectady, arrived at Hopewell today to tell the authorities of overhearing two men discussing the Lindbergh baby during a trip on the night boat on March 10.

Shenton told reporters that he overheard much, but he would only quote a remark, "What shall we do with the baby?" One man appeared to be a German, the other an Italian, he said. Their conversation indicated that one was a taxi driver living in Brooklyn.

Another Gangster Fails in Hunt for Baby

Hopewell, N. J., March 23 (AP)—Racketdom's reach, groping for the stolen Lindbergh baby, has proved no longer than the law's.

Owney Madden, whose name looms large in the annals of Manhattan's outlawry, has been working on the mystery 20 days without result. He has made three trips to the Lindbergh estate.

Madden, who once ruled Hell's Kitchen by terror, has been fighting an attempt to return him to Sing Sing Prison as a parole violator.

He was accused in 1915 of instigating the slaying of Patsy Boyla, rival gangster, and was sent up for 20 years for manslaughter. Paroled eight years later, he was recently accused of breaking his parole after investigators of laundry rackets unearthed testimony he erred in calling himself a laundry operative.

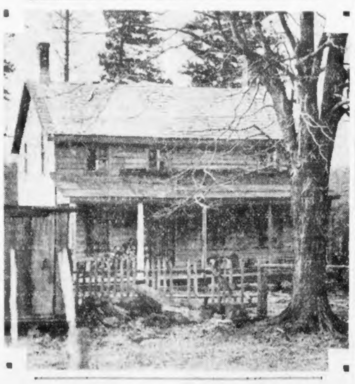
Three undercover men working independently of authorities also have failed to get the baby back thus far. They are Salvy Spitale and Irving Bitz, authorized by the Lindberghs to deal with the kidnapers, and Morris Rosner, who announced the baby was safe and would be returned. The announcement was made more than ten days ago.

GIRL GIVES KIDNAP CLUE AS 'LADDER WOOD' IS SEIZED

THERESA DERSI SALVATORE MULICA

SHE SAW "KIDNAP AUTOMOBILE"

New Jersey detectives continue investigating story of Miss Theresa Dersi of Wertsville, not far from the Hopewell home of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, that she saw occupants of a car found near the Lindbergh property the day the colonel's baby was kidnaped. Miss Dersi is shown being questioned by Detective Salvatore Mulica. (International News Photos.)



WHERE NEW CLUES WERE FOUND

In this lonely mountain cabin, police seized samples of writing, a tool chest and pieces of wood similar to the white pine used in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping. The house is five miles from the Lindbergh home and a photographer discovered the clues it held. (International News Photos.)

Mrs. Hutton Suffers Relapse After Conducting Services

Los Angeles, March 23—The two appearances she made at Angelus Temple Sunday have caused Aimee McPherson Hutton, evangelist, to suffer a relapse from the sickness which confined her to bed last week.

Aimee McPherson Hutton

Mrs. Hutton was brought to a hospital when the reported stress of overwork had undermined her health and caused a slight form of anemia. She underwent a blood transfusion to build up her resistance and was considered well enough to conduct her services.

According to her physician, Dr. C. Mackenzie Jones, Mrs. Hutton exerted herself too strenuously in the Sunday sermons and was forced to return to bed.

San Francisco Deb Bride Today of Woolf Barnato

San Francisco, March 23 — Miss "Jack" Claridge Quealy, 24, society debutante, will be married today to Woolf Barnato, 36, British sportsman and son of Barney Barnato, South African diamond king.

Woolf Barnato

Their romance had its inception in London several years ago and they became secretly engaged when Barnato came to San Francisco two months ago.

The couple will sail for England from Los Angeles on the steamer Empress of Britain to make their home in London.

Morgan on Radio Tonight in Plea for "Block Aid" Plan

New York, March 23—With every possible precaution taken to insure his safety, J. Pierpont Morgan will make his first radio broadcast tonight in an appeal for support for the "block aid" plan for the relief of the jobless.

J. Pierpont Morgan

He will speak over a coast-to-coast network of the National Broadcasting Co. His talk will be sent out on short wave from Pittsburgh so that it may be heard abroad.

Owing to his long aversion to public appearance, Mr. Morgan will speak over a secretly-placed microphone at 8 p. m.

Mystery Mary and Chaplin Start Marriage Rumors

Paris, March 23—Parisian society circles are wondering just what is the meaning of the hurried trip Mademoiselle Mary Reeves, close friend of Charlie Chaplin, made to Naples, Italy, to see the famous comedian off to Japan.

Mlle. Reeves

Chaplin and the "mysterious Mary" have been seen together enough lately to cause speculation as to Charlie's possible marriage intentions, but there has been no admission on either side that such a step is contemplated.

Miss Reeves stated she did not know when Charlie would return from his Oriental trip. In fact, she said, she doesn't know if he is going to return.

Illness Prevents Stimson From Attending Hearing

Washington, March 23—Illness prevented Secretary of State Stimson from testifying today before the Senate foreign relations committee on his interpretation of the revised League Court protocol.

Sec. Stimson

Secretary Stimson is suffering from a cold and sore throat, and his doctor stated it would not be advisable for him to leave home to attend the hearing. Within a few days, it was said, he would be able to appear before the committee and give his interpretation.

NEW DECISION IN 'WIFE'S BODY NOT HUSBAND'S' CASE

Death Turns Law's Ally on Gangs

'HAPPINESS IS BEYOND LAW,' SAYS COURT

Famous Bachelor Jurist Declares Statutes Should Be Repenned

Cambridge, Eng., March 23 (INS)—A verdict in the now famous alienation of affections suit in which Justice McCardie, England's noted bachelor jurist, ruled that "a woman's body is her own possession," was handed down here today.

Justice McCardie decided against the plaintiff, John Dover Place, a Cambridge grocery clerk, who had accused Dr. Charles Frederick Searle of enticing his wife away from him.

The suit attracted international attention because of Justice McCardie's observation from the bench some weeks ago that a husband has no right to believe that because he has married a woman he is lord and master of her body.

NOT BOUND IN BOOKS

Justicé McCardie enlarged upon this theme in rendering his decision, venturing the opinion that human happiness and contentment lie beyond the scope of statute books and recommending that the laws now covering relations between man and wife be reconsidered in the light of woman's emancipation.

McCardie's decision was a complete vindication for Dr. Searle. The judge ruled that the physician was justified in supporting Mrs. Place's decision to leave her husband.

IT'S BEYOND THE LAW

"It seems clear," Justice McCardie said, "that the position as between husbands, wives and third parties calls for reconsideration by law in view of the new status of married women.

"The rights of married women to form independent friendships and enjoy their own amusements can never besolved by law.

"Comfort and happiness in married life rest not upon statutes or decisions, but on mattesr above the realm of law."

TO SEEK LINDY BABY ON ISLE

Bogota, Colombia, March 23 (AP)—Maj. Benjamin Mendez, one of the best fliers in Colombia and a friend of Col. Lindbergh, today received permission to fly to Beunaventura, where it was reported the kidnaped Lindbergh baby was being held on an island near the coast. The flight will not be made, however, unless the American Legation requests it.

Maj. Mendez, himself the father of a two-weeks-old son, said he could fly it in three hours.

A direct flight between the two cities never has been made and at some points the trip is extremely dangerous, for the plane must be lifted to 20,000 feet over three ranges of the Andes. The islands off the coast once were a pirate stronghold.

Policewoman Wins Round 2 in 'Exile' Verbal Bout

Betty seemed content to rest on the lead she piled up in the first round, and Irene intent on evening the battle.

For eight weeks the match was brewing unseen in the Copley Plaza, where Betty was guarded by Irene and Irene was "ruled" by Betty.

The battle opened yesterday when the exiled witness was released from police care. She was held until "no bills" by the Suffolk grand jury cleared three men of the North End killings of Frankie "Gustin" Wallace and Bernard "Dodo" Walsh.

"I didn't live a life of luxury. I was like a prisoner. I ate in one-arm lunch rooms," charged Betty. All these and more in answer to the story in a morning newspaper that depicted her a "Cinderella" at city expense.

Her denials continued through an article in the same newspaper today. She was quoted further in criticism of Irene.

All of which opened today's round.

"I'm so used to her complaints over a period of eight weeks they bother me little now," countered the policewoman.

"Complaints about linen, soap, furniture, food and even the

"I thought I was sent as an escort but I turned out to be a personal maid.

"Yes, I took her to a night club (this in answer to a charge that Miss Franklin was forced by her escort to go to the club) but she asked me to take her. She wanted to see Sophie Tucker. Much to my sorrow I granted the request and had to pay the bill from my own pocketbook.

"The only thinks I received was her complaint that her name and picture were not nl the paper the next morning.

"She chose the places to eat in. She could have what she wanted and I accompanied her.

"Her boy friend visited her daily and some times I walked the hotel corridor because she objected to my presence.

"There were no restrictions on her time. She found time to send valentines, many of them to her friends in the police department."

At 90 Capen st., Dorchester, the Franklin home, Betty refused to see "reporters, cops or any other guys."

Experts agree that the ladies have a round each.

STUDENT HELD FOR MISSOURI GUNPLAY

Attacked by Masked Group, He Draws Pistol and Opens Fire on His Rivals

Columbia, Mo., March 23 (AP)—A bitter campus feud, which inspired reprisal for the kidnaping of a pretty University of Missouri co-ed, was the cause, police were informed, of the shooting early today of three students by a fellow student, who helped engineer the abduction.

It was a bloody culmination of a rivalry of long standing between the schools of engineering and law, a rivalry that developed from innocent pranks to pistol play.

One of the three engineering students felled by bullets may not recover and his alleged assailant, who went to the university to study law, also is in critical condition.

IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Frank Luckey of Columbia is in a critical condition from a bullet wound in the stomach, and Jerry Cebe of St. Louis, captain-elect of the university wrestling team, has wounds in an arm and leg. Bus Love of Jefferson City, Mo., was slightly wounded by a bullet that grazed his leg. All are students in the school of engineering.

Burnis Frederick of Union Star, Mo., a student in the school of law who was quoted by Prosecuting Atty. Franklin E. Reagan as admitting he fired the shots, also was taken to a hospital suffering from a possible fracture of the skull, inflicted, he said, by a group of students who attacked him near the university campus just before the wounding of the three students.

Last Saturday afternoon, Miss Mary Butterfield, of Kansas City, who was to have been crowned St. Pat's queen at the engineering school's dance, was "kidnaped" as she was leaving her sorority house and was held captive until almost midnight, when she was returned to the campus too late for the coronation.

MASKED ATTACKERS

Prosecutor Reagan said he was told by Frederick that as he and another student were leaving a private home near the campus last night, a group of students, some of them wearing handkerchiefs over their faces, attacked him. The prosecutor said Frederick admitted firing six shots.

Luckey and Cebe told the prosecutor Frederick was one of four law students who "kidnaped" Miss Butterfield Saturday.

Frederick and three other law students had appeared before a justice of the peace Monday and asked that four engineering students be required to post bonds to keep the peace. None of the students wounded last night was among the four named in the complaint.

Pending a hearing, however, the four students named had been required to give temporary bond of $100 each.

Walker Will Spend Holidays at Springs

Hot Springs, Va., March 23 (AP)—Mayor Walker of New York has decided to spend the Easter holidays at Hot Springs, where he is recuperating from a recent illness.

He had planned to leave today, but said he was so refreshed that he had decided to delay his departure.

RARE PAINTING FOUND IN ATTIC

Middletown, Conn., March 23 (INS)—When Albert J. Conlin cleared the attic of the house he recently bought, one of the first objects headed for the refuse pile was a small painting. On second thought, he cleaned it and was told by an expert that it was worth probably $30,000 and was painted about 1472 by Pietro Della Francesca.

Word of the find reached Mrs. Ethel L. Simmington, former owner of the house. She decided she had not intended to leave the painting behind and asked the Superior Court to back her up. Judge McEvoy ruled she should have it. Conlin will appeal.

300 FLEE FIRE IN SALEM

Salem, March 23—In a fire which at one time threatened to destroy the entire factory, 300 employes, including 130 girls, were lead to safety today from the four-story wooden building by M. Kagan, superintendent of the plant at Broadway and Canal sts.

Starting in the shipping room the fire had gained such headway that a general alarm was sent in calling all the apparatus in the city beside outside aid from Peabody and Marblehead.

The building, which houses the Pilgrim Shoe Co., the Philco Shoe Co. and the Harbor & Dearborn Shoe Co., was damaged to the extent of $4000.

It was only after a stiff fight that the flames were brought under control, and firemen said that if there ha dbeen a high wind a general conflagration might have resulted.

Col. Emmett Addis Is Taken by Death

Col. Emmett Addis, United States Army, holder of a distinguished medal for service during the World War, died last night in Massachusetts General Hospital after a long illness.

He lived at 104 Revere st., Beacon Hill, with his wife, Mrs. Louise Hayden Addis, who survives him. Col. Addis was commissioned in the army in 1903 after serving in the ranks. He came to Boston in 1926 from Fort B. A. Russell, Cheyenne. For a time he was acting chief of staff of the 94th Division, in the Custom House.

SNIPER FIRES ON MINE GUARD

Athens, O., March 23 (AP)—An ambushed sniper early this morning fired on a guard patroling the Lick Run mine of the Manhattan Coal Company in the Hocking Valley strike area.

The guard returned the fire with a sub-machine gun, firing 40 rounds in the direction of the shooting. No one, apparently, was injured and the sniper escaped.

The mine is in a remote region and the sniping comes as the latest development in recent disorders that led Gov. George White to threaten the district with martial law.

Speakeasy Proposal for Prohibition Fair Rejected

Washington, March 23 (AP)—A suggestion by Senator Tydings of Maryland that a speakeasy be included in a prohibition fair to be held here April 17, has been rejected.

The Maryland Democrat, an anti-prohibitionist, proposed this in a letter to William Rufus Scott, director of the fair.

In a statement today the organization said a speakeasy had not been planned because they "are as old as the liquor traffic itself" and had not been produced by prohibition.

A soda fountain will be included, however, "to typify the shift to soft drinks under prohibition."

POLICE DEATH TRIAL OPENS

New Bedford, March 23 (AP)—Roland S. Bousquet, 26, of Norton, went on trial in Bristol County Superior Court today before Judge Frederick W. Fosdick charged with the murder of Edward Gobin, an Attleboro policeman.

The State, represented by Asst. Dist. Atty. Frank E. Smith of Taunton, contends Bousquet fired when the officer sought to question him. The slaying occurred on the night of Jan. 20. Bousquet was captured a few hours later. Attorney James H. Leedhan, Jr., of Attleboro, represents the accused man.

FOUND GUILTY AS 'FIREBUG'

Angelo Albiso, of Belden st., was found guilty in Suffolk Superior Court today of burning a building and furniture with intent to defraud an insurance company.

Special Officer Hagerty, prosecuting the case for the state, told Judge Walsh and a jury that on Oct. 25 the fire department responded to an alarm at 20 Belden st. A fire was discovered and long paper trailers were found leading to rooms and closets.

Hagerty presented the case under the new regulation which provides that Boston fires shall be investigated by Boston police instead of inspectors of the state fire marshal's office. Judge Walsh deferred sentence.

Pedlar Who Sought 'P. A.' Loses $70 and Wins Court Lecture

He took the suit to the shop of Morris Levy, 72, in Washington st., Tuesday afternoon. That evening he discovered he'd left $70 in a trousers pocket and dashed for the shop, to find it closed.

When Levy opened the store Wednesday morning, Doukas was sitting on the doorstep. They both searched the pockets. No money was found, and Officer Fox appeared and tried to act as arbitrator.

Finally, Fox arrested both men, charging Levy with larceny, and Doukas with assault on the tailor.

Today Judge Duff found both not guilty, and cautioned Doukas to be more careful with his money in the future.

5 INDICTED IN BANK HOLDUP

Three South End youths and two from Lowell were indicted by the Middlesex County grand jury today in connection with the $26,000 holdup of George M. Harrigan, president of the Lowell Trust Co., in Burlington, last summer.

Frederick E. Shibley, 25, Frederick T. Furrah, 23, and James W. Walsh, 26, the South End men, were charged with the actual robbery.

William H. Conlin, 30, and Edward McCaffrey, 28, both of Lowell were charged as accessories.

Furrah and Walsh were also named with Arthur C. Clifford, Angelo Canpolope and Nicholas Frangolis in indictments charging two store holdups in Lowell, March 15. The group will be arraigned late today.

EXILE ENDS FOR GANG DEATH WITNESS

Elizabeth "Betty" Franklin, star witness in the Gustin-Walsh gang slayings, packing bag at Copley-Plaza Hotel after she was "freed" from her "exile" by Deputy-Supt. of Police McDevitt. She planned a long vacation and hinted she would go to Bermuda. Reports that she had lived like a "queen" at the city's expense while she was at the hotel were indignantly denied. She said prison would have been as pleasant. She plans to return to work as a secretary when her vacation is over. (Staff Photos.)

GRANTS PERMIT FOR AIR LINE

Mayor Curley today gave officials of the Pan-American Airways permission to operate a line of cruiser-type hydroplanes between Castle Island, South Boston and Newfoundland. Service will start within a short time.

Officials informed the mayor that the location is an ideal one because there is a spillway nearly two miles long extending from the outermost tip of the island to President Roads. A temporary building on the island will be used as a waiting room and a floating landing will be placed off the island. The new line will carry 40 passengers in each plane.

The mayor stated that eventually the company may establish a base at the island for trans-Atlantic travel. Passengers would be taken abroad in three days, traveling only during daylight and going by way of Jacksonville and the Azores.

Aimee McPherson Suffers a Relapse

Los Angeles, March 23 (INS)—Suffering a relapse after apparently recovering from a breakdown that necessitated a blood transfusion last week Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton, the evangelist, today was removed to a private apartment near Angelus Temple.

Dr. C. M. Jones said that "with a long rest and freedom from exertion and worry Mrs. Hutton will be able to gain her health."

FIREMEN GUARD AGAINST SO. END BLAZE

Collision of a gasoline truck and another machine flooded a large area of Columbus ave. and West Newton st. today. Firemen were called to rope off the area and spread sand over it to prevent possible ignition by a carelessly thrown cigarette stub or matches. Police had to reroute traffic from the junction of the two much-traveled thoroughfares, and for a time there was a tieup of autos in the vicinity. (Staff photo.)

GAS MASKS PUT IN PLAY

Six Lawrence Boys Frozen Out of Free Train Ride

Bridgeport, Ct., March 23 (INS)—Literally frozen out of a refrigerator railroad car on which they had taken a fareless ride from Hartford, a shivering sextet of Lawrence, Mass., youths appeared in the railroad station here this morning.

They were taken in hand by police and gave their names as Joseph Buckley, 19; Joseph Burke, 18; Eugene Burns, 17; Thomas Flynn, 19; John Grosso, 19, and Mario Lucchesi, 17.

"One of you Irish lads come here and tell me what's up," ordered Judge James Shannon in city court.

Burns stepped forward. He explained they had wearied of Lawrence, and with $3 among them, decided to go to Brooklyn, where an uncle of one of the group would support them in comfort. He did not name the uncle.

Burke later said they had ridden on a truck to Hartford, and there to escape the cold had crawled into what they subsequently discovered was a well-refrigerated railroad car.

NEUTRALS MOVE FOR PEACE FOR DEMOCRATS

BY BERNARD J. DOHERTY

With but three days left in which to make withdrawals, the possibilities of a last-minute compromise between the Smith and Roosevelt forces were discussed today with renewed vigor in Democratic circles.

Interests friendly to both sides of the controversy, it is understood, anxious to keep the Massachusetts Democracy in harmony, are tendering their good offices.

SHIFT IN SENTIMENT

Mayor John J. Murphy of Somerville, who with Mayor Curley and City Treasurer Dolan constitutes the committee on substitution of delegates on the Roosevelt slate, claimed today that there has been a decided shift of sentiment within the last few days to the New York governor.

"We made our overtures and they were not listened to," he said. "The door is still open up to 5 p. m. Friday. We are doing the listening now. After that we're going ahead.

"We don't believe that former Governor Smith is a candidate. As late as last Friday, he said he did not ask for a slate of delegates. We are not opposed to Smith because he is not a candidate."

To strengthen the Roosevelt ticket in the western part of the state, Mayor Murphy said, there will be a few changes in delegates from some of the districts.

G. O. P. HAS OWN ROW

The Republican rank and file, gleefully sitting on the side lines watching the row in the Democatic camp, were handed a jolt with the disclosure that one prominent Republican on the Liggett slate for Hoover had rebelled and been dropped at the last minute.

He is William F. Whiting of Holyoke, who succeeded Hoover as Secretary of Commerce under the Coolidge administration.

Whiting will run independently as an unpledged delegate from the first district. He and Gallup refused to pledge to Hoover.

The former Secretary of Commerce said that he is not against Hoover or for any other candidate at the present time.

GOOD FRIDAY TO BE OBSERVED

City Hall will be closed from noon to 3 p. m. and the stock market and Superior Criminal Court will be closed all day on Good Friday—but otherwise the business of the city will be conducted, for the most part, as usual, it was indicated today.

Mayor Curley issued an order today for closing of City Hall during the three hours in the afternoon of the world's most solemn anniversary observance.

With exception of Superior Criminal Court, all courts and the district attorney's and clerks' offices will function as usual.

All State House employes will remain at their posts during the day, and the House of Representatives will conduct its regular short Friday session, as it did last year.

The Boston Stock Exchange will be closed all day Friday.

MANY STARVING, SAYS CONNERY

Washington, March 23 (AP)—Rep. Connery of Massachusetts today told the House rules committee that "Americans are dying of starvation by the hundreds," in appealing for legislative right of way for his bill to provide $700,000,000 for loans to states for relief purposes.

"Their bodies are found in their rooms and pneumonia or something else is given as the cause," he said.

Connery, chairman of the labor committee, explained his bill would provide that cash be advanced to states on securities and promises to pay.

"The purpose is to grant emergency relief by co-operation of the federal government with the several states in relieving the hardship and suffering caused by unemployment," he said.

The committee took it under consideration.

Five Apartments Are Looted in Few Hours

Five apartments were entered by a Brighton flat worker Monday, it was learned by police today, all of the robberies occurring between 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon and 6 o'clock at night.

At the home of John F. Bassett, 1560 Commonwealth ave., the intruder had a long tussle with the occupant of the apartment, but succeeded in getting away.

Other losses reported were as follows: Mrs. Louise M. Wise, 1576 Commonwealth ave., $400; at 319 Allston st., where the homes of Mrs. Frances Gruffre, Miss Florence H. Kiser, and Robert H. Richardson were entered, clothing and jewelry were taken, valued at $350.

Iowa Delegation Pledged to Hoover

Des Moines, Ia., March 23 (AP)—Iowa's delegation of 25 will go to the Republican convention instructed to vote for the state's native son, President Hoover.

Saxonburg, Pa., March 23 (AP)—Saxonburg has taken a page from ancient history to solve the economic situation—everybody's swapping.

Swapping has been going on for a year and has become so common the newspaper has incorporated a "Swap Column."

Butter and eggs are exchanged for merchandise at stores, for gasoline and old parts for autos, and, since the boys' band started, for musical instruments.

Coal is hauled or teaming done in exchange for horse-shoeing. Last spring ground was plowed in exchange for half the crops. Any man can get land on promise to part with one-fourth of the produce. Cabbage plants were exchanged for tomatoes and bulbs and seeds for flowers and vegetables.

Last summer crabapples went for pickles, hay for a load of straw, a gallon of buttermilk for a peck of spinach. In the fall apples were exchanged for cider or for year-old hens for winter laying, apples were picked and services rendered in all lines of work for whatever the farmer had the worker wanted.

Merchants say everybody is happy under the arrangement.

Woman, 2 Men Burn to Death in Crash

West Chester, Pa., March 23 (INS)—A woman and two men were burned to death today when their automobile collided with another machine. One of the victims was tentatively identified as Leon Bryan of Philadelphia. Their machine burst into flames after colliding with a car operated by Charles H. Canover of Atglen, who was slightly hurt.

LEAGUE COURT'S PROTOCOL O. K., SAYS STIMSON

Washington, March 23 (AP)—Secretary Stimson stated today in a letter to the Senate Foreign Relations committee that he believes the revised protocol for American adherence to the World Court "fully accepts" the Senate's reservation against advisory jurisdiction by the court.

The secretary's declaration, read by Chairman Borah, provoked a storm of debate in the executive session and it was decided to ask Mr. Stimson to appear for questioning.

Stimson sent his statement in letter form because ill with a cold he was unable to appear before the committee today.

Senator Johnson (R., Calif.), an opponent of the court, declared after the session:

"The secretary's statement is at variance with what he has said heretofore."

The committee is sharply divided over whether the revised protocol which Elihu Root helped to frame amply safeguards the reservation voted by the Senate in 1926 to prohibit the court from rendering an advisory opinion in matters in which America is concerned, without first obtaining the consent of this government.

The other powers never accepted this reservation and the revised protocol was drafted.

$3,800,000 Payday for Chicago Employes

Chicago, March 23 (AP)—There will be a $3,800,000 cash payday for Chicago's school teachers and city employes tomorrow.

Mayor Cermak announced that banks have purchased enough tax anticipation warrants to make the money available. After payday is over, the city still will owe employes $23,000,000 in overdue salaries.

Searsport, Me., March, 23 (AP)—The freighter Marjorie Weems which grounded on Sears Island in Penobscot Bay here last night was pulled off on the rising tide today by the Coast Guard cutter Kickapoo.

The vessel was reported as undamaged and anchored again in Searsport Roads to await its turn at the dock to take on a cargo of potatoes.

ELECTRICITY ELIMINATES DRUDGERY IN HOME

By LEAVITT L. EDGAR

Vice-President of the Boston Edison Co.

Since the days of the earliest New England settlers, with the rudely constructed log cabin and its massive fireplace, the kitchen has been acknowledged to be the center of the American household and home-life.

"The open hearth provided heat, light and a medium for cooking. The mode of living was, of necessity, on a modest plane, fraught with hardships, yet, as proved by history, no less substantial than what is now called 'the art of living.'"

And while a glimpse backward over a never ending path of progress toward the devolopment of new standards and the perfection of home life, reveals a remarkable transition, the kitchen, seemingly in spite of its complete evolution, remains the hub of the home wheel, whether humble or pretentious.

PLACE OF BEAUTY

In recent years, probably more than ever before, the kitchen has come into its own because of the somewhat sudden realization of its possibilities as a place of beauty with the tendency pointing to a universal acceptance of the trend to happier homes through happier kitchens.

The housewife has seized upon it with a natural preference as the favored room in which to express her artistic taste. She is no longer handicapped in attaining this ideal. The tools to work with are hers and with instinctive finesse, step by step, her workshop is becoming the showplace of the home.

A new era of home efficiency, comparable to modernized industrial methods, is nothing, more or less, than a long overdue movement to develop the home facilities, at least on a par with business environment. Home lighting, for instance, has, as yet, received but scant attention, yet business, industry, and even schools have been constantly improving illumination standards to protect the worker and his children.

Since the alliance between eye strain and inefficiency has been identified, corrective steps have been taken with eminently satisfactory results and it is but proper that the home deserves and should receive the same attention.

HEALTH A FACTOR

Electrical progress has accomplished more than any other single medium to influence home, and indirectly, community development. No one will dispute that an electric refrigerator is a sound investment. In a study on food spoilage, the United States Bureau of Chemistry and other dependable sources of information offer definite proof of the dangers associated with food decay and the harmful action of bacteria, yeasts and excessive moisture.

It is knowledge of these facts which enabled the engineer to develop modern electric refrigeration. Health protection still remains the fundamental factor in the wide public acceptance of the electric refrigerator, which locally and nationally was far in the van of so-called major electrical merchandising units sold during the year 1931. Economy (more pronounced in recent months through general reductions in unit cost of practically all nationally advertised makes), cleanliness, general utility and convenience along with its attractive appearance in the home are also among its more prominent assets.

ELECTRIC COOKING

Perhaps the outstanding contribution to the modern home which features throughout labor saving equipment, is the modern electric range. A far cry from the early products which in comparison resembles the finished job of the present in much the same way the first automobiles compare with the 1932 models). It is representative of the best designing and engineering skill in the electrical industry. Long since progressed beyond the stages of experiment, in simplicity of operation, household economy and through sheer beauty, it stands apart in the field of cooking. It becomes difficult to consider it without using the popular reference "electrical servant" because the range is the major household necessity with practical possibilities far superior to what the public has been generally using in years past to prepare cooked foods.

Time and temperature controls are notable adjuncts with electric cooking, which actually seems to have developed a new field of culinary art. Vegetables and meats are found to retain their nutritive values, natural flavors, first becoming seared over, then cooked throughout retaining the desired taste with an absolute minimum of shrinkage, which in itself is an important economy.

What has developed as the most important aside, however, is pride in ownership with the resultant light, airy and cool kitchen, the workshop of the housewife according to the new standard. It has rightfully been said that electricity is as clean for cooking as it is for lighting.

HOUSEHOLD HOT WATER

Within the metropolitan area served by the Boston Edison Company, electric ranges are installed in practically all cases and demonstrated without additional charge. Members of the Edison home service staff are available at all times in the new electric kitchen at Boylston st. or in the customer's home to explain and illustrate the infinite possibilities of electric cooking from the viewpoint of economy as well as efficiency.

One of the more prominent advances in household refinement is the development of electric water heating through the use of insulated storage tanks. Heated electrically on a special rate which offers electrical energy at a very low unit cost for what is termed "off peak" use, it assures a dependable hot water service throughout the day. Primarily economical, it enjoys the further advantages of safety and cleanliness with the assurance of a continuous and instantaneous supply.

The popular list of electrical ap-

ELECTRICITY VITAMIN AID

A great deal is heard these days about vitamins. Children and adults, too, for that matter—need food containing the various vitamins if they are to enjoy health and vigor and even dispositions.

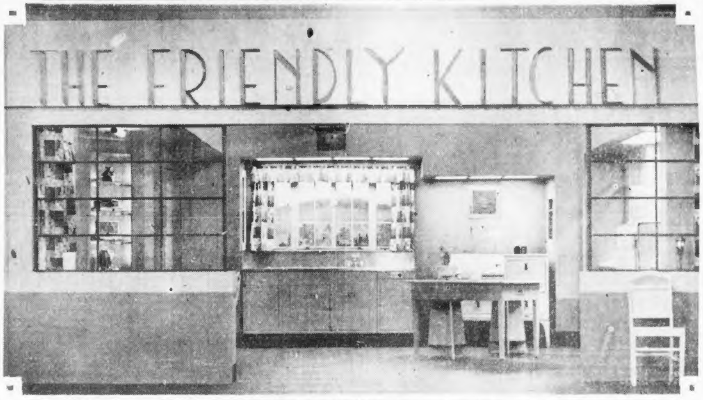
Take vitamin A away from a child and he is underfed. Lacking vitamin B, growth is stunted. Without vitamin C, scurvy may develop. And vitamin D is essential to assimilation of food.

Vitamin A is found in such foods as bananas, string beans, butter, eggs, carrots, cod-liver oil, cream, dandelions and other greens, sweet potatoes, spinach, squash and tomatoes.

Vitamin B is found in asparagus, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, celery, fish roe, grapefruit, lemons, lentils, lettuce, milk, onions, parsnips, peas, potatoes, pineapple and greens. Common sources of vitamin C are apples, cabbage, cauliflower, peaches, oranges, peas, potatoes, rutabagas, string beans. As to vitamin D, this is supplied through open-air sunshine, from your physician's ultra-violet ray machine or from doses of good old fashioned cod-liver oil.

All the vitamin alphabet belongs in the family diet. Greens and vegetables are vitally necessary. Properly cooked, they retain all their nourishing vitamins. Proponents of electric cookery say that because cooking on the electric range necessitates very little water, all food value is retained and not poured down the sink drain as with older forms of cookery.

MR. AND MRS. EDISON PATRON: THIS IS YOUR KITCHEN, TOO



This is the Boston Edison Co.'s new All-Electric Kitchen opened today in the presence of hundreds of clubwomen and homemakers, and it marks the great expansion of the Edison Co. and the part that electricity and electrical appliances are playing in the development of the modern home. HUB WIRE CHIEF TELLS CAUSES OF FIRES

Poor Materials, Bad Work and Carelessness Are Chief Offenders

Walter J. Burke, head of the wire division, one of the most important branches of the Boston fire department, says comparatively few persons in using radios, toasters, percolators, lights and other electrical appliances, give thought to the protective measures used to guard against defective and careless wiring.

The Wire Division is a fire-prevention bureau. Its inspectors safeguard life and property by seeing to it that regulations governing electrical installation are lived up to.

"Electricity when correctly installed and properly used is one of the safest and most helpful servants which can be employed in the home," said Chief Inspector Burke. "Electrical inspection by the City of Boston is a service rendered to you for your protection, free of charge, and we of the Wire Division cordially extend the benefit of our service to all and ask your co-operation in the fulfillment of our duties.

"In this city, a contractor must comply with the requirements of the Wire Division before an electric installation is started. He must be a licensed electrician. If the inspector finds the work satisfactory a certificate is issued authorizing the power company to install service. If the work is found defective, a written record is prepared, the contractor is notified and the certificate withheld until the defects are corrected.

"Every inspector is conscious of the lack of capacity and the dearth of outlets in the majority of homes and aware of the prevalent use of multiple attachment plugs and the thousands of feet of flexible cord strewn here and there, and he, above all others, realizes the danger which may result from this substandard wiring with its accompanying over-fusing of circuits.

Electric Range on Job While Mother Goes to Church

There's no worry for mother these days about getting the Sunday dinner ready with the electric range. Remember when the good old soul used to be up almost at daybreak in order to get the dinner started so that she could go to church. It's different now in the electrical kitchen. The roast and vegetables are prepared in a jiffy along with the pudding, tucked into the electric range oven and ma goes to church with the rest.

She has nothing to worry about, for automatic controls of the range see to it that the dinner is cooked just right and no more. Then everything is ready for the table the minute the folks get home.

HUB RELYING MORE NOW ON STEAM LINES

Plans Underway to Service Large Section of the Back Bay District

The installation of 5658 feet of underground steam mains in the streets of downtown Boston during the past year is additional proof that district heating is rapidly becoming one of Boston's most prominent public utilities.

This added length to the system, plus 19,187 feet installed as of January 1, 1931, makes a grand total of 24,845 feet, or slightly more than four and one-half miles of pipe.

The first extension of the year which was started May 27, 1931, consisted of 630 feet of 12-inch main installed in Washington and School st. and through School st. to Tremont st. This 12-inch tie line was primarily installed to support that end of the system and also to enable the shutting down of a small leased heating plant which has been operated since 1907.

EXTENSION WORK

While work was under way on the 12-inch tie line in School st., construction was started on an 8-inch and 6-inch main which was installed in Kilby and Hawes sts. from Milk st. The purpose of this extension was to serve the Garrison Trust Co. Building, 60 Congress st.

The longest extension installed during the past year was the High and Batterymarch tie line which consisted of 1650 feet of 14-inch and eight-inch steam main. One thousand, one hundred and eighty-six feet of 14-inch main was installed from a point opposite the Western Union Building on High st. to Batterymarch in Batterymarch st., and from this point 465 feet of eight-inch main was installed to the junction of the eight-inch and six-inch mains in Kilby st. at Hawes st.

The 14-inch section of this line will eventually be part of a main trunk line which it is proposed to extend from Batterymarch st.

EDISON ELECTRIC CO. OPENS NEW HOME LABORATORY

By BERT FORD

Formal opening of the Boston Edison Co.'s new Friendly Service Kitchen and Laundry at 39 Boylston st. today proved an epoch in the domestic life of Greater Boston.

In establishing this all-electric household laboratory for the public, the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston, by its enterprise, set a pace for the whole of New England. It is another milestone, a distinct triumph in domestic science.

Appropriate exercises marked the event. Mrs. Carl L. Schrader of Belmont, president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, with a membership of nearly 150,000, was the guest speaker in a special WEEI broadcast. More than 150 leaders of women's clubs and affiliated women's organizations, were guests.

HUSBANDS THERE TOO

And husbands, who are showing increasing interest in labor-saving devices and other equipment for the modern home, were entertained today.

Charles L. Edgar, president of the Boston Edison Company, joined Mrs. Schrader in addressing housekeepers who enjoyed the program by radio in their homes. An article by Leavitt L. Edgar, vice-president of the Boston Edison Co., on the magic development of household devices may be found in another column of this supplement.

Miss Emma Maurice Tighe, home service director of the Boston Edison Co. in her radio message, said paradise couldn't possibly have anything more alluring than the new kitchen and laundry.

MODEL OF BEAUTY

The new Friendly Service Kitchen is all that the title implies. It is a model of beauty, efficiency, perfection and comfort. It is electrically-equipped throughout. It banishes drudgery.

As Vice-President Edgar says, it is a far cry from the clumsy, sooty affair of log cabin and later days.

The color scheme is blue and orange. The walls are light blue with orange trimmings. The linoleum of dark blue is patched with orange. There is a shelved-grotto in the breakfast alcove finished entirely in orange and the shelves in the other glass-doored cabinets are orange.

The Edison All-Electric kitchen shows that the trend is a return to the larger kitchen to afford space for the electrical devices necessary to the up-to-date home. Another departure is the removal of the family laundry from the basement or cellar to the first floor adjoining the kitchen for added convenience.

The commodious sink facing two broad windows is finished in white porcelain, with shelving of monel metal, which embodies the qualities of stainless steel. There is a built-in dish washer and a heated compartment for drying dishes. There is another heated compartment in one of the cabinets.

NOVEL LIGHTING

The lighting is novel and effective and with the color scheme is cheering and restful. The only exposed lights are in the center ceiling cluster. The others are panel and tubular lights, the latter running the length of the lower part of the dish cabinets to illuminate the bench sections.

The Edison Friendly Service Kitchen also shows that the breakfast alcove is coming to be a necessary adjunct in the modern kitchen with its electrical appliances, in that it affords excellent opportunity to serve informal tidbits and luncheons, making it doubly attractive to husbands in entertaining men friends.

ELECTRIC RANGE

There are electrical percolators, food-mixers, etc., and a closet for vacuum cleaner and mops. The laundry is equipped with a washing machine, presser, and a new type of water heater, a large metal boiler fitted with insulated storage.

The outstanding feature of the kitchen is an electric range various makes of which are being featured by the Boston Edison Co. The electric range with its up-to-the-minute refinements, aroused more curiosity and interest among the women guests than anything else, it seemed.

They are equipped with time and temperature controls. They are proof against all odors, even that of onions. They make it possible to retain the natural vitamins and flavors of vegetables and meats.

Vice President Edgar in his special article calls these ranges "electrical servants," and stresses their beneficial influence on home and community.

The electric range has met with such prompt popularity that the Boston Edison Co. has arranged with electrical contractors and electrical dealers to handle electric ranges equipment. It has already become a substantial branch of electrical merchandising.

NATIONALLY KNOWN

Only the more prominent, nationally advertised electric ranges, made by firms long identified with the electric equipment industry, will be handled by local electrical men, it was announced.

Rapid progress has been made in recent years in the perfection of electric cooking. They say "time and temperature are now the household chefs," if electric ranges are used.

A housewife, or her husband for that matter (and many men are fond of showing their prowess in preparing a meal), simply has to measure and mix the necessary ingredients for the desired dish as directed, then set the automatic temperature control at the proper point, the time control for the prescribed period of time and a third control starts the oven.

JUST FORGET IT

An entire meal can be put in the electric oven in the morning and it will be perfectly and deliciously cooked and ready for serving when the housewife returns for dinner

EDGAR HEADS N. E. BUREAU

One of the outstanding organizations in the electric utility industry throughout the country is the national refrigeration bureau. The New England division of the bureau is headed by President Charles L. Edgar of the Boston Edison Co. as regional director.

The bureau was organized in 1930 when a quota of 1,000,000 electric refrigerators was established for its goal, to be achieved through national and local advertising campaigns stressing the health and economy of electric refrigeration. This mark was reached and a second quota of another million units has been set for 1932.

State chairmen working under Mr. Edgar are: W. C. Bell, New England Power Assn., Massachusetts; C. E. Carter, Danbury Gas and Electric Co., Connecticut; Fred D. Gordon, Cumberland County Power and Light Co., Maine; Avery R. Schiller, Public Service Co. of New Hampshire; R. F. Whitney, Narragansett Electric Co., Rhode Island, and W. A. Buttrick, Twin State Gas and Electric Co., Vermont.

The week of October 1 has been named as Electric Refrigeration Week with regional and state prizes offered for the best year's showing.

Another special campaign has been planned for December, when the slogan will be used, "Invest in an electric refrigerator for Christmas."

FRIGIDAIRE IS GUARD AT 75 HOSPITALS

Boston Institutions Adopt Refrigerator After Many Severe Tests

Frigidaire has been selected not only by 75 hospitals and infirmaries of Greater Boston to safeguard food for the sick and convalescing, but—more important still—the low, unvarying temperatures of Frigidaire stand guard every moment over all the antitoxins, serums, smallpox and bacteria vaccines prepared in the Massachusetts antitoxin and vaccine laboratory for use throughout the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Frigidaire was selected for this important task only after exhaustive tests had proved over a long period of time, the temperature varied only two degrees!

Mother Finds Washing Easy Task Now

I don't believe in "wool gathering," but I do think that every now and then we should sit down and take stock of our blessings—among them our electric washing machine.

And perhaps properly to appreciate them we should look back to not so many years ago when Monday meant rising at the crack of dawn, descending into the depths of a gloomy cellar, and rubbing and scrubbing and lifting and wringing and boiling and stirring hour after hour until along in the middle of the afternoon the last tub of clothes appeared on the line, and you flopped on the davenport, exhausted. Today, with the help of our trusty electric washing machine, we handle Blue-Monday labors in a third, or quarter, of our former time, and, with less than a third of the labor.

Perhaps you took the same step that I did in graduating from old-fashioned tub washing to modern methods. It was the experience with the "funnel-on-a-stick." With it we pumped up and down by hand and felt that at least our knuckles were not being worn to the bone. This funnel was really the first application of the vacuum principle that governs most electric washing machines today.

Countless improvements and refinements have been made that produce fluffy blankets, beautifully washed curtains and even shirts and collar bands from which hand rubbing has been completely eliminated. The children's dresses, your precious linens, in fact, all your clothing lasts longer now that they are divorced from rubbing on corrugated tin boards.

And oh! the relief of being independent of the uncertain laundress! It isn't necessary to have all the washing done on Monday or any other single day. With a large family it is possible to wash two days a week and iron one. And in many families "himself" is even painlessly pressed into service, his mechanical mind fascinated by this miracle of Mondays. In one family I know where there are two husky boys and a little girl, the clothes are collected Sunday night and taken to the laundry.

Monday morning early the water heater is turned on and dad with mother tackle the job together. By 8:30 the washing is on the line and breakfast prepared and eaten, and the week is cheerfully on its way.

I feel sure modern women agree that an electric washer is the most helpful and economical household investment that you can possibly make—and, best of all, I'm told that some of them cost less than 5c a week to use! And then, there's that comfortable "pay as it saves for you" method of financing.

ALL-INDUSTRY NIGHT APRIL 1

"All Industry Night," under the sponsorship of the Metropolitan Electrical League will be held at the Boston Chamber of Commerce Friday, April 1, with J. F. Owens, president of the National Electric Light Assn. and President Charles L. Edgar of the Boston Edison Co. as guest speakers.

"All Industry Night" was proposed by the National Electrical League Council of which J. J. Caddigan of Boston is president and is a part of a nation-wide co-operative activity to effect a better understanding among allied interests in the electrical industry to stimulate the improvement of public service.

Persons concerned with the manufacture of electrical equipment or energy, retail and wholesale distribution, installation, maintenance and associated phases of the business are expected to participate. Reservations are available through the M. E. L. offices on the seventh floor at 182 Tremont st.

LABOR BANISHED BY EASY WAY

BY MARTHA LEE

Hundreds of Easy washing machine owners say that the Easy Damp-Dryer saves them more than an hour every wash day! For one thing, there's no more tedious hand-feeding of the clothes through a wringer, piece-by-piece and again and again. You just transfer the clothes in bunches in a few seconds, from the Easy Washer to the Easy Damp-Dryer. Then the water is whirled from the clothes without squeezing or twisting, so there are no deep wrinkles to iron out.

Comforters, blankets, rag rugs, and even fluffy feather pillows that can't go through a wringer, may be washed in the Easy Washer and are handled easily by the Easy Damp-Dryer.

And the dryer, of course, makes you independent of the weather. So much water is removed from the clothes that they dry quickly on a line indoors, making it possible to wash and iron the same day, weather or not.

ELECTRICITY SERVES YOU

pliances is constantly growing. Unit sales in 1931 for such items as electrical washers mangles (ironers), table appliances, vacuum cleaners, hand irons, food mixers and other widely used home electrical products showed in a convincing way the pronounced movement toward the 100 per cent electrified home. Women are no longer content to use antiquated methods.

New electrical appliances are constantly appearing and the day of the electric sink (with self contained dish washer), appurtenances such as the electric plate warmer and clothes drier, with incidental smaller appliances of still more recent vintage, has already arrived.

The laundry, which heretofore, has been looked upon as deserving only of basement space supplements the kitchen on the ground floor of the modern home. This has been made possible through the use of electrical laundry equipment, clean and easy to operate, so that the old order of things has been completely changed. Modern home planning and the architect now give the laundry light and airy space adjacent to the kitchen.

TRIUMPH

ELECTRIC refrigeration has made a nation-wide march into the homes of over a million families. And rightly so, for only electric refrigeration has been able to give the home so much for so little.

Low operating cost and proper food preservation have made the electric refrigerator very economical. Its continuous dry cold has tremendously improved the preservation of foods. Its even temperature, under the safety point of 50°, has prevented rapid food spoilage. It makes all the ice you need, in a convenient size, ready for instant use. Its temperature control has added innumerable tempting "hot-weather" dishes to the family menu through fast freezing. Truly, electric refrigeration is a triumph of this modern age of invention and the wizardry of electricity!

Never, since the beginning of electric refrigeration, has there been such dollar for dollar value as is today obtainable in any reputable make of electric refrigerator. Easy terms and lowest prices offer an unprecedented opportunity for savings — invest in your electric refrigerator and have its benefits now

LIGHT LEADERS WILL DISCUSS SERVICE

National Electric Association to Hold Conference Here March 29 and 30

An important conference on home service work will be conducted by the National Electric Light Association at Hotel Statler, March 29-30. President William C. Bell of the New England division, National Electric Light Association, and vice-president of the New England Power Association, will open the two-day conference Tuesday morning.

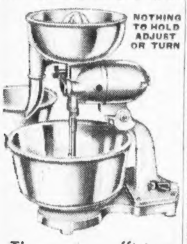
Speakers at the opening session will be: W. G. Keay, chairman of the commercial section, New England division who will discuss "partnership"; Miss Florence Freer, chairman of the home service sub-committee, N. E. L. A.; C. P. Golding, chairman electric range committee, "Home Service Helps for Range Users"; Miss Florence Chisholm, director of home service for the Malden Electric Company, "Instructing the New Appliance User in the Home," and Mrs. Elizabeth S. Macdonald of the Frigidaire Corporation speaking on "What the Homemaker Wants to Know About Electrical Household Equipment."

MANY SPEECHES

The speakers Tuesday afternoon will be R. B. Brown, Jr., whose subject will be "Why the Electric Industry Is Interested in Home Lighting." E. W. Commery, residence lighting engineer of the General Electric Company, who will talk on "Eyesight Conservation," and E. W. Atwater, illuminating engineer of the Westinghouse Lamp Company, who will discuss "Ultra Violet Light." Addresses will also be made by Julius Daniels, president of the Illuminating Engineering Society and Miss Lillian Eddy.

Julius Daniels, president of the Illuminating Engineering Society, and Miss Lillian Eddy, home lighting specialist, are other speakers to be heard on the afternoon program.

THERE'S ONLY ONE MIXMASTER



NOTHING TO HOLD ADJUST OR TURN

The strong, efficient easy-to-use mixer

Creamier mashed potatoes in 5 minutes

Creamier whipped potatoes — smoothly blended mayonnaise —fine-grained cake and waffle batter — eggs, icings beaten to perfection — oranges juiced and drinks mixed almost instantly, etc., etc. Mixmaster does ALL the work—nothing to put together or take apart. The motor tilts back—beaters drain right into the bowl. Use either your own or the two beautiful opaque green bowls that come with it. They are self-turning and so force all mixtures through the beaters automatically.

No Need to Turn the Motor Upside Down to Use the Juicer

Fast, convenient juice extractor

It fits on top of the motor—can be left there permanently or removed after using. The automatic salad oil dripper releases oil into mayonnaise, etc., at any speed you regulate. Mixmaster cleans itself, take off the beaters or not, as you wish. It is the powerful, sturdy, easy-to-use mixer. NEW LOW PRICE, $18.75. At all Boston Edison Company Stores, and other good stores and shops in Boston. 42 years making Quality products.

THE BEST ELECTRIC APPLIANCES MADE

Amazed

Mrs. Carl L. Schrader, Women's Club president, who was amazed at completeness of the Edison Co.'s All-Electric Kitchen-Laundry Labratory.

SUNBEAM MIXER PROVES WORTH

It would be easier to separate a mother bear from her cub than it would to take away from the Martha Lee Cooking school the Sunbeam Mixmaster that came last October.

We depend on it to beat up egg whites in a second, cream in less than that, to cream butter and sugar for our cakes—and mix the batter, too — to beat boiled frostings, salad dressings and marshmallow whip. And it takes only a second to squeeze cupfuls of fruit juice.

You don't have to hold the Sunbeam, as you do some mixers, you know — the bowl turns automatically and it stands by itself. Just set the speed you want and leave it.

We thought we made pretty good sponge cakes in the school by hand, but nothing that could compare to the fluffy, yet moistly delicious angel and sponge cakes that we turn out with the help of this truly wonderful mixer. We like it specially, too, because it runs so quietly and smoothly, and because the motor tilts back, so the beaters drain into a bowl for easy cleaning.

Station WEEI Will Study Sun Eclipse

A pioneer in research work conducted during the eclipse of the sun in January, 1925, broadcasting station WEEI is already making plans to study the effect, on both high and low wave broadcasting, of the recurrence of this rare spectacle on Aug. 31.

The scheduled total eclipse may be observed on that date over a part of Massachusetts and in Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont. H. C. Hamilton, superintendent of the Boston Edison laboratory, has arranged for an observation site at Norway, Me., where scientific data will be gathered.

WEEI officials have discussed the matter with Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the observatory at Harvard University, and with the voluntary co-operation of several recognized amateur astronomers, it is expected that much valuable data will be obtained.

E. B. Rideout, WEEI meteorologist, will report on the before and after effects of the eclipse with relation to weather conditions.

Chocolate Mousse Is Easy to Prepare

Melt 2 squares of chocolate in double boiler and add 1 cup of sugar. Scald 2 cups of evaporated milk and add slowly to the chocolate, stirring until smooth and thick. WOMEN'S CLUB CHIEF LAUDS KITCHEN

Mrs. Carl L. Schrader Is Amazed Over Electric Labor Saving Ideas

When the head of an organization of nearly 150,000 women endorses household equipment, it must be good.

Mrs. Carl L. Schrader of Belmont, president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, not only gave her approval to the Boston Edison Co.'s new "Friendly Service Kitchen," but went into ecstasies over it.

Nor was it surprising. Any sensible housewife would be captivated. If any doubt it let them pay a visit and learn for themselves.

Mrs. Schrader's appraisal should be rated as that of an expert, based as it was on experience and observations derived from close contact with the needs, endeavors and diversified interests of women over a wide field.

Because of her general outlook, Mrs. Schrader might be expected to be somewhat radical, but on the contrary she is a conservative in domestic affairs. She believes in personal shopping, careful buying and the budget plan. All of which makes her opinion as to the usefulness and practicability of the electrically - equipped "Friendly Service Kitchen," of far greater interest to the rank and file of housekeepers.

WAS AMAZED

Mrs. Schrader said she thought she had a fair knowledge of the latest electrical household devices, until she visited the new and enlarged "Friendly Service Kitchen," but that the simplicity and perfection of the electric ranges, dishwashers, washing machines, irons, toasters, refrigerators, etc., astonished her.

She said husbands are quick to take advantage of labor-saving devices in office, shop and factory, and that wives should take equal advantage of modern electrical devices which make household duties a joy rather than labor.

Mrs. Schrader said she was tremendously impressed by the color schemes which were restful and cheering.

"You are greeted by the prettiest colors," she added, "blue, green, yellow and orange, with gorgeous spots of orange, a spring medicine in themselves. And there is the same cheer in the kitchen, the same alluring neatness, with not a suggestion of shadow anywhere.

"It was surprise after surprise. Words fail in trying to describe the amazing compactness and efficiency of the electric devices in operation. Just to see them at work is an education. I wouldn't have missed it for anything."

HEADS 386 CLUBS

Mrs. Schrader was elected president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs, May 15, 1930. The influence of the organization is shown by the fact that it is made up of 386 clubs, with a membership of 63,465; four city federations with a membership of 46,603 and seven affiliated organizations with a membership of 29,940, making a total membership for the federation of 137,008.

Mrs. Schrader lives at 58 Payson rd., Belmont. Despite her white hair and the fact that she has a son 23, Mrs. Schrader possesses a youthful charm and a personality that has endeared her to the army of women of which she is the leader.

ELECTRIC REFRIGERATORS HELP TO BRING BACK PROSPERITY

REFRIGERATOR IDEAL GIFT FOR BRIDE

Mother, Too, Will Appreciate Saving of Food in Economy Days

By MARTHA LEE
Boston Evening American Food Expert

Remember the hot day last summer when you wanted to take the children for a swim, but didn't dare go till the ice man came?

Remember the food you gave away to neighbors before starting on that four-day motor trip, because you knew it would spoil in the old ice chest before you got home?

The day has gone when an electrified refrigerator was a luxury beyond the means of the average purse. Any one may enjoy all the comforts and conveniences of electric refrigeration at an expense no greater than the usual monthly ice bill. It is, of course, a fact that the initial cost of an electric refrigerator is greater than that of an old-fashioned ice chest. Well, a furnace costs more than a stove, and an automobile more than a horse and buggy—but this hasn't kept the stove and the buggy in use, has it?

MODERN METHODS

Records of modern housekeeping methods show that the American housewife wants the best—and electric refrigeration is without question the better, safer way for preserving foods in the home. It is as dependable and trouble-free as your electric lights.

It is entirely automatic. It keeps your refrigerator at the zone of safety and creates a dry cold that preserves perishable foods for weeks without deterioration. It will make pure, clear ice cubes for table use, and delicious frozen desserts, without labor and the mess of ice and salt.

Electric refrigerators are far beyond the experimental stage. They are as standardized as your automobile. I know of one electric refrigerator that has been in active service for ten years, and another that has been working four years without a call on the service man. And these are not rare instances.

FOR WEDDING GIFT

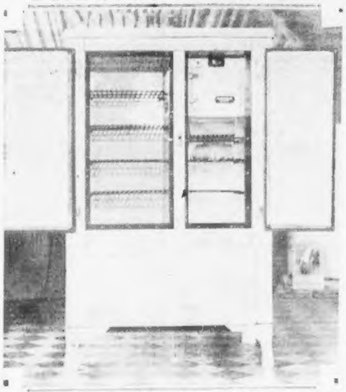
Literally thousands of homes, stores and apartment houses enjoy electric refrigeration 365 days in the year. The wise landlord equips his apartments with these modern cooling systems, realizing a house or an apartment so equipped will be seldom idle.

Electric refrigerators are a popular wedding gift. In fact, I have a letter right here on my desk from a fond father saying:

"What shall I give my daughter for a wedding present that will be more than ornamental, yet not a veiled hint to 'work, for the night is coming?'"

Certainly a shining white porcelain electric refrigerator would be more than an ornament and yet would not suggest drudgery, from which this devoted dad is anxious to protect his only daughter. And imagine the pride and pleasure the bride will take displaying this shining earmark of the modern home to admiring—and a bit envious—visitors.

GUARDIAN OF HEALTH



Here's the Norge electric refrigerator, with doors open and ready for business in keeping foods in good condition, and demonstrating that every home should have an electric refrigerator.

KELVINATOR PIONEER IN NEW ICING

Well Known Electric Refrigerator Has Many Exclusive Construction Features

That is the reputation earned by Kelvinator which has been making electric refrigerators since 1914. Kelvinator is a name second to none in the industry.

Kelvinator is a one-purpose organization devoting all of its time and great resources to the single problem of making the best electric refrigerator possible. That is the customer's assurance of complete satisfaction in purchasing a Kelvinator.

Kelvinator has striven for and has met such major requirements as economical operation, long life and all round convenience.

Eighteen years of satisfactory performance is the proof of these claims, as thousands of owners throughout the country can testify.

Some of the exclusive refinements and conveniences that Kelvinator patrons enjoy are: Four-zone cold; Iso-themic tubes; the frost chest; the Kold Keeper; rubber flexo trays; the Kelvin Krisper; bar type shelves; electrically lighted interiors; chromium plated hardware; Kelvinator insulation and cabinet legs.

Every year since 1914 when the first Kelvinator caused a sensation on the market, the volume of letters attesting to the satisfactory, long-time, year-in and year-out performance in homes throughout the nation, have poured in upon the manufacturers.

These unsolicited testimonials tell of Kelvinator electric refrigerators that have been giving satisfactory electric refrigeration for 10, 12, 14 and even 17 years. This enviable record coupled with Kelvinator's three-year guarantee, means that every purchaser of a Kelvinator is securing the best value in the electric refrigeration field.

EDISON BUREAU ON RELATIONS IMPORTANT

Public Interest and Good Will Big Consideration With Service Corporation

One of the most interesting, and, from the viewpoint of all public utility companies, one of the most important duties is the establishment and maintenance of sound and cordial relations with the public it serves.

This phase of the service supplied by the Boston Edison Co. is directed by Joseph B. Groce, who has served in the post of head of the company's public relations bureau since Dec. 1, 1923.

Joseph B. Groce

Mr. Groce, prior to his Edison association, was a newspaper man, director of industrial relations and welfare work at the Fore River Plant of the Bethlehem Ship Building Corp. and director of the New England Bureau of Public Service Information.

Louis D. Gibbs, for many years superintendent of the company's advertising department, who is widely known both in and out of newspaper circles, is assistant head of the bureau.

HAS GREAT VALUE

As its name implies, the public relations bureau of the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston is an organization through which complete satisfaction is available to customer and public in all dealings with the company.

By segregating a group of men and women of proven talents in so for as being broad visioned enough to recognize the viewpoint of the individual and at the same time equipped with a wide knowledge of their employer's business, the bureau becomes a medium of tremendous value.

It is a part of the service paid for by each purchaser of electric current and ranks to no other single company function in importance.

With public relations work an accurate yardstick with which to measure not only public attitude but the effectiveness or lack of effectiveness of various new and untried company policies, its dual purpose tends to identify it as the listening post of the corporation. Interpreting the mass of information received or sought, for officials of the company to act upon, is the subsequent duty of the public relations group.

HAS WIDE FIELD

The bureau in its entirety covers a wide field. Matters of public policy, complaints, adjustments, interpretation of company policy, broadcasting, advertising, and press relations are the more important duties for which this bureau is held responsible.

With the exception of the broadcasting department personnel, men and women from other company positions where particular experience and inherent qualities of their own have made them well fitted for customer and public contact work, have been assigned to the public relations job.

This particular service has a constant uplifting effect of the morale of the various departments engaged in routine and contact work, which includes telephone and correspondence contact as well as face-to-face transactions.

The doctrine of a service that gives 100 per cent satisfaction is traditionally deep-seated within the company so that even the new employe soon acquires the shape of the mold and carries on his duty of serving the public.

STATION WEEI

Broadcasting Station WEEI, which, through commercial pursuits since its inception, has more than paid its own way, wields a powerful influence towards building good-will through the service it provides. This "Friendly Voice," so-called, is on the air from early morn to midnight.

To sum up the activities of the bureau it is well to consider a group of specialists and service experts whose constant goal is complete service and fair play upon which is built the company's standing in the community. The success of their efforts is mirrored in the opinion of the man in the street who is asked and answers "yes" to the question—does your electric utility company provide a service that is human as well as good?

Farming No Drudge With Electricity Doing the Work

In these days of electricity for all, who said farming was a hard life? Electricity pumps the water, churns the butter, milks the cows, bakes the food, sweeps the rooms, dusts the furniture, saws wood, lights the house, barn and poultry houses.

It does the washing, ironing, keeps the right time, works while the folks sleep or are away, provides the telephone with power and brings education and knowledge through the radio to families in the most remote districts. What's more it still has a lot of undiscovered uses.

Shows Basic Theory of Refrigeration

Refrigeration has been defined as the process of removing heat. A simple example of this process is the evaporation of a small amount of alcohol on the palm of the hand. The alcohol is changed from a liquid to a vapor.

This latent heat is taken from the skin causing a reduced temperature and is accomplished in the same manner. Sulphur dioxide is allowed to boil, that is to change from a liquid to a vapor in an evaporator.

This evaporator is placed in the food compartment so that when the boiling takes place, the latent heat of evaporation required by the sulphur dioxide is taken from the food in the box and refrigeration thusly accomplished.

KITCHEN STILL CENTRE OF HOME LIFE, BUT MADE EASY NOW

EXPERTS SOLVE NUMEROUS PUZZLES IN COOKING

By EMMA MAURICE TIGHE
Home Service Director, Boston Edison Company

The opening of the new Edison family kitchen at 39 Boylston st. is an occasion of happiness to every Edison employe and particularly to the members of the home service division, because the opportunities to help Edison service customers are so greatly increased.

Our home service specialists are known to many thousands of homemakers who attend the friendly cooking school and the community electrical housekeeping schools, which are presented for two days in a different community center each week.

The radio broadcasts which are transmitted directly from the stage of the home service auditorium at 39 Boylston st., through station WEEI, makes it possible for the large radio audience to share with the visible audience in the auditorium the first half hour of the friendly cooking school on Tuesdays from 2 to 2:30 p. m., and Thursdays from 10 to 10:30 a. m.

BIG SERVICE STAFF

The home service staff consists of 15 women, most of whom are graduates of colleges of home economcis and decorative art. The home service specialists know and appreciate how hard it is for the mother of today to live up to the requirements of her heart and her homemaking.

The home service specialists devote their time to home calls for the purpose of giving free instruction and free information covering the care and operation of any piece of domestic electrical apparatus.

LIGHT SPECIALISTS

There are also two home lighting specialists who are always pleased to suggest effective and attractive decorative lighting effects and to give reliable advice pertaining to comfortable and artistic lighting of the home.

In the Edison friendly kitchen the home service specialists are constantly developing new short cuts and practical applications in the art of modern homemaking, the result of this research is yours for the asking.

Frequently we hear educators and perplexed parents comment sorrowfully that high school graduates and in many cases college graduates have not definitely made up their minds as to the career which they desire above all others.

Accordingly, we in the friendly kitchen were impressed to receive a request from the South Boston Neighborhood House to the effect that a dozen boys, aged 10 to 12 years, had expressed a definite desire to learn to cook. Accordingly a series of six lectures was arranged and I assure you that these boys are the most interested future cooks we have ever addressed.

The boys are being taught the principles of measuring, the methods for combining ingredients and the simple steps which result in a properly poached egg and a warm beverage if mother is ill.

REFRIGERATION

Occasionally we are asked the question, "Which electric refrigerator shall I purchase?" and the difficulty in replying to that question always brings to my mind the poem one often sees in the requested poetry columns, that poem which starts:

"Which shall it be, which shall it be?
I looked at John, John looked at me."

Of course, when people are in doubt as to the type of electric refrigerator they should purchase, the solution of arriving at the proper type is not an exact parallel with the poem because with the refrigerator a decision is always reached, notwithstanding the fact that the leading makes of electric refrigerators at the present time are all so fine that the matter of choice requires careful consideration and advice.

Maybe you are on the point of purchasing an electric refrigerator and you have talked with many salesmen, all of whom tell you that their respective refrigerator represents the one you should buy. The strange part of it is that each representative tells a very convincing, logical story. On the other hand, you are going to purchase only one refrigerator at the present time.

The result is that you are more or less confused and you would like some reliable unbiased advice. If this is your situation, we should be happy to have you visit the Edison friendly kitchen and you will find on display the leading electric refrigerators sold by the local electrical dealer and the department stores.

The friendly kitchen specialists will answer your questions willingly and impartially with no attempt to influence your purchase as to type.

Electric Flatiron Has Big Place in Rooms of College Dorms

There's been a lot written about electric refrigerators, washing machines and hundreds of other home appliances that electrical wizards have brought out, but somehow the electric flatiron seems a bit shy of publicity. Such a useful citizen, too!

But the truth of the matter is the electric iron has gone collegiate. In many a college dormitory the electric iron is kept busy being handed from room to room by students who have to press their own trousers. Quite different from the old days when trousers had to go to the tailor or without pressing at all.

NEW FEATURES IN MAYFLOWER

The Mayflower electric refrigerator, because of its graceful special design, is proving particularly alluring to the housewives of New England. Instead of the ordinary box-like appearance, it embodies all the charm of the finest old Colonial furniture.

The long, graceful curve of the legs, in keeping with the general design, the bevel-edged corners and beautiful chrome-satin hardware, all reflect the simplicity and spirit of Colonial times, which make the Mayflower refrigerator especially adaptable to New England homes.

The cabinet is beautifully finished in either porcelain or lacquer, according to choice, and both finishes are durable and remarkably easy to keep clean. The interior is likewise finished in porcelain and so designed as to leave no awkward crevices or corners to collect dirt.

The trays in the cooling unit produce a larger number of ice cubes in less time. Ice cubes, salads and desserts can be frozen in but a fraction of the time it took the old way.

Another unusual and exclusive Mayflower feature is the ribbon-type shelves that prevent tipping or upsetting of containers. Bottles and dishes slide along smoothly over the flat surface of the shelves.

In addition to these and many other features exclusive to the Mayflower, each model is completely equipped with a vegetable freshener, a water bottle, a rubber cube tray and a recipe book without additional cost.

ALADDIN HAD NOTHING ON MODERN HOME, SAYS MARTHA LEE

ELECTRICAL COMFORT FOR EVERYBODY

Father, Mother, Baby and Old Grandma Are Helped by Wonder Servant

By MARTHA LEE.
Boston Evening American Food Expert.

In the old days, Alladin spent much time and elbow grease polishing up a dull-looking vessel before he could summon the servants that cooked his food, warmed his house and answered his other needs.

Alladin has nothing on us today. Just press a button and that good servant, Electricity, is waiting to do our bidding. I am sure that every one agrees with me that electric appliances have taken more grief and backache out of homekeeping than anything that ever happened under the housekeeping sun.

What would grandmother say if she could peek into our electrically-equipped houses and see us in a pretty smock moving from place to place, pushing buttons and plugging in for the magic help our electric appliances afford.

DISH WASHERS TOO

The newest homes are equipped with electric dish washers, auxiliary electric radiators, electric health lamps, built-in antennaes for our radios, and, praise be, a generous number of floor plugs in every room.

Even if you're not fortunate enough to fall heir to a house completely equipped with these many electrical aids, you can be sure that your toaster or electric iron will not remain lonesome very long. Every birthday or anniversary and every Christmas will be an excuse for one more electrical device for mother, sister, father, and even for King Baby.

There's one of the cutest little food-warmers that's so reasonable and will warm baby's midnight meal in a jiffy without traveling barefooted, probably, all the way to the kitchen. Then there's the latest thing in electric irons for mother—the thermostat built right in and your choice of three temperatures.

NEW TOASTERS

One of the newest toasters toasts two slices on both sides at one time and pops them out to you done to perfection without your giving it a thought. An electric waffle iron is just indispensable—it draws Sunday night supper guests like a magnet. And I'd sooner part with my back hair than my electric sandwich toaster.

Then there are the handsome new coffee percolator sets with automatic shut-off, tray and panelled creamer and sugar, to lend distinction to any table. And a whole meal can be quickly cooked on the electric table stoves, which are griddle, toaster, broiler, egg poacher and waffle iron in one.

For the larger family, there's the automatic electric range that's a wizard for perfect cookery, and even shuts itself off when the cooking is completed, if you're delayed on your drive or shopping tour.

The Easy Way

No need of aching elbows and blistered fingers with a Sunbeam Mixmaster in the kitchen. Just forget the old egg beater and try a Sunbeam mixer.

PORCELAIN TO RESIST ACIDS DEVISED

Engineers Develop New Lining of Steel for Use in Refrigeration

One of the most attractive features in the new Frigidaire advanced refrigeration models is the gleaming white all-porcelain-on-steel finish which Frigidaire now offers on all its household cabinets.

Housekeepers in particular appreciate the many advantages given in this exclusive feature. The beautiful gleaming white porcelain is a permanent finish, can be easily cleaned, and will not scratch or mar.

A new development in the 1931 Frigidaires is the acid-resisting porcelain lining which has been developed by Frigidaire and General Motors engineers.

Frigidaire was the first manufacturer of electric refrigeration to use a porcelain interior in all its cabinets, replacing the previously unsatisfactory enamel lining which could not withstand the strain of years in household use.

The next move by Frigidaire was to make porcelain exteriors, and a year all painted exteriors were discarded in favor of the highly desirable porcelain finish.

In the advanced refrigeration models all surfaces are in white porcelain and the advantage of an acid-resisting porcelain interior has been added to every household cabinet.

Through tests applied to this new porcelain show it to be not only permanently resistant to all food acids, but also over long periods of time is proof against acid solutions of twice the strength of the most severe of food acids.

Station WEEI Will Have Newsboy Night

Elk's Night for the newsboys will be featured over broadcasting station WEEI from 10:30 to 11:00 p. m. tonight when the 75-piece band of the New England Tel. & Tel. Co., American Legion Post, broadcasts from that station.

A second feature on the station's evening program will be the third in a series of dramatic sketches presented by the Robjent Repertory Players titled "The Case of Mary Ware." The same all star cast will be featured.

Modern Beauty Owes a Lot to the Use of Electric Power

Modern beauty owes a lot to electricity and its appliances. Electric hair curlers and a host of other things for the beauty parlor are only a slight mentioning. Then there are the electric heating pads, that rheumatic grandma declares are marvels for comfort. Some of them automatic, too, so that one can go to sleep without being roasted alive.

Then there are the small home workshop power tools that have been made possible through the expansion of electric service, automobile cleaning appliances and hundreds of other new wrinkles used with small electric motors.

RANGE LEAST OF WORRIES NOW

Fancy a housewife actually preparing dinner while shopping or playing bridge at a neighbor's.

Modern domestic magic makes it possible. Electric cookery experts say there is nothing phenomenal about it since the advent of the electric range.

The up-to-date housewife, they explain, simply places food in the oven, sets the timer on her electric range, adjusts the temperature control and is free to turn her thoughts to other things.

She can work in the garden, take a morning spin in her car, do her shopping, visit a neighbor, or attend a club meeting and when she returns, without the slightest concern, she will find dinner all cooked in the electric range and ready to serve.

"Most of us can recall the day, not so far distant, when it was difficult ot induce people to light their homes with electricity," says C. D. Gentsch, of Gentsch and Thompson Company, distributors here for General Electric-Hotpoint ranges. "Since then electrical devices galore have been installed.

"More than a million women now cook electrically and this number is increasing daily because the modern electric range is speedy, clean, economical and time releasing. It heats quickly and the heat is applied directly to the food to be cooked. Accurate temperature control and timers make every recipe certain. There are no cooking failures, no undercooking, no overcooking."

SIMPLICITY IS NORGE FEATURE

Norge history is an example of a good idea which grew and expanded and brought good things and prosperity into the lives of thousands of people.

Norge did not pioneer in mechanical refrigeration but as a precision manufacturing organization, alert to the genius of fine mechanical endeavor it appreciated the superiority of Rollator Refrigeration and was quick to grasp its opportunity.

In January, 1927, following two years of proving the Rollator principle in the laboratory and in hundreds of homes, the Norge Corp. was formed with the Detroit Gear and Machine Co. as a subsidiary. Its foundation was solid and Norge rapidly developed a background of field and selling experience to augment its engineering and factory experience of long years' standing.

Norge Rollator Refrigeration was first installed in a wide variety of application, domestic and commercial, and later through the widening of markets.

In 1929 the attention of Borg Warner was attracted by the success of Norge and Norge merged with Borg Warner. From that date on Norge has shown an enviable increase in sales and popularity.

EDISON SCHOOL POPULAR

According to F. A. Belden, superintendent of the Boston Edison Company promotion department, attendance at the electric cooking classes and housekeeping schools in Boston and communities served by the company has increased during the past year to the capacity of the halls provided for these regular seasonal activities. At the present time general classes in electric cooking are conducted in the company home service auditorium on the second floor of 39 Boylston st Tuesday afternoons and Thursday mornings weekly. In addition special Monday and Thursday evening meetings are held for women in business. "At the classes given in Boston alone," he said, "more than 1000 women a week are taking the opportunity to view the electric cooking demonstrations conducted by the girls on the company's 'home service' staff."

F. A. Belden, Supt. Edison Promotion Dept.

Further evidence of the increasing public interest in electric cooking and complete electric home equipment is seen in the steadily increasing attendance at the two-day courses in electrical housekeeping conducted by the Edison Company Wednesday and Thursday afternoons throughout the winter in community centers within the company's service area. Home lighting, refrigeration and cooking are featured, a question period is conducted, and recipes for the foods prepared during the demonstrations are distributed. Today and tomorrow afternoon classes are being conducted at the Milton Town Hall on Canton ave., Milton.

Pa Just Dotes on Doing Washing Now With Machine

With the electric washing machine, no longer does the average hubby dread being called upon to share what was known to the average American home as "Blue Monday."

In fact, John often likes to do the job alone. He puts in the wash, turns on the power and after lighting his pipe, either reads his favorite newspaper or does something else until the washing is ready to hang out.

AIM TO REDUCE ACCIDENTS

With a 1931 record of but one lost-time accident among 615 employes engaged in so-called hazardous work in generating and substations of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston, this group is competing with the generating department of the Duquesne Light & Power Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., for safety honors during the present year.

A suitable trophy donated by executives in charge of the generating departments of the respective companies will be awarded at the end of the year.

Competition with the Pittsburgh utility was arranged through the efforts of R. E. Dillon, Edison generating superintendent, after a review of national safety figures for 1931 which showed the Duquesne group with a perfect record of no lost time due to accidents in 1,700,000 working hours.

Incidentally the sole black mark to prevent the Edison group from achieving a 100 per cent listing was a 32-hour absence by one employe due to an infected thumb blister.

ELECTRIFIED HOME NEAR AT HAND

Power Has Greater Use Every Year, Declares League Chief

The day is rapidly approaching when the completely electrical home will be as commonplace as the automobile.

This, of necessity, places the electrical contractor in a position to be of inestimable value to the home builder and home owner who orders or is contemplating new wiring installation or wiring changes.

It makes the electrical contractor the [illegible] of the home.

These are some of the progressive views voiced by Richard Lincoln, president of the Metropolitan Electrical League of Boston, in a discussion with Edison officials at 182 Tremont st. today, before he joined the throng of guests at the dedication of the Boston Edison Company's [illegible] and Laundry at [illegible]

STRONG INFLUENCE

"The [illegible]," said Mr. Lincoln, who is head of the [illegible] department of the Boston Edison Co. "The electrical contractor's recommendations on wiring installation wield a strong influence on the extent to which the home accepts electrification.

"Interior wiring is the highway over which electrical service must travel and the reliable contractor and electrician who [illegible] recommending complete wiring installation [illegible] and [illegible] the home owner money."

He also outlined the development of standard trade practices in electrical merchandising and the wholesome spirit of cooperation existing between electrical appliance dealers and utility companies.

AGREE ON POLICY

It is agreed by members of the Boston Retail Trade Board and utility company representatives that the standard merchandising policy which has been adopted is of mutual benefit to all concerned. Utility advertising and promotional work is of substantial assistance to all other retailers who [illegible] through the medium of connected load on the utility's [illegible] other merchandising [illegible] of [illegible] to the [illegible].

What has been accomplished to [illegible] the efforts of the electrical [illegible] has not been done overnight. Prominent dealers in the field recognized the need for coordinated effort as soon as the domestic and commercial appliances emerged from the experimental stage.

Certain [illegible] were put into [illegible] the future of the business which today is the basis [illegible] central station [illegible].

UNIFIED CODE

The first proponents for a unified code based on [illegible] and so designed to protect the interests of [illegible] was Charles L. Edgar, president of the Boston Edison Company. The trade practices and policies of that company, in view of what has transpired in the Metropolitan Boston area, [illegible] a substantial [illegible] which is attracting both the attention and commendation of other central station companies throughout the country.

Since its inception in 1924 the Metropolitan Electric League has grown to a membership of 400 with representation in 55 cities and towns in Greater Boston. Offices of the league are located at 182 Tremont st.

VACUUM LED WAY IN HOME CLEANING

Meet the "Daniel Boone" of household electrical appliances — the vacuum cleaner.

In no branch of the domestic electrical equipment industry have greater improvements and refinements been made than in vacuum cleaners, the pioneer of them all.

The vacuum cleaner made its debut 25 years ago and the entire industry gracefully and gratefully admits that it blazed the way for the numerous electrical devices of the present day which make housekeeping a pastime rather than drudgery.

Brides of a quarter of a century ago had none of the labor-saving devices of today. The first [illegible] of this type, the vacuum cleaner, in the past 25 years has knocked at the door of every home and has been admitted to more than [illegible] modern American households.

BLAZED THE WAY

The [illegible] Sweeper-Vac, made by the Sweeper-Vac Company of Worcester since 1907, was one of the first appliances of its kind. The original box model, when [illegible] compared with the company's latest improved type, is as different as the old stage coach would be to the swanky and [illegible] 1932 models of automobiles.

Crude as they were by comparison with the present day vacuum cleaners, the early models won instantaneous recognition. Its value as a household servant has never been challenged.

The box type was followed by a model employing a revolving carpet sweeper in conjunction with a suction nozzle, a type popular in 1911.

The Standard Sweeper-Vac, the latest product, compact, powerful, ball bearing and efficient, is a long and progressive stride since the box model of 1907.

In the last two or three years the small hand vacuum cleaner has won its place in the growing [illegible] of electrical devices. Air cleaning is a form of dry cleaning.

Draperies, hangings, stuffed furniture, lamp shades, etc., can be effectively air-cleaned with the new type of hand vacuum cleaner. The new Sweeper-Vac Hindette has been developed to meet this need.

Foe of Dirt

SELLERS AND BUYERS OF FOOD PRODUCTS Meet In The BOSTON AMERICAN

The Boston American, with the largest evening circulation in New England (which means the largest home going circulation), and the only established cooking school conducted by a Boston newspaper, naturally offers a responsive market for advertisers of food products.

That's one reason why the Boston American is the only Boston standard size newspaper to show a gain in food advertising for 1931 and the first two months of 1932.

By the same token it is a complete and reliable reference for buyers of food products because it contains announcements of modern foods and instructions in preparation.

after shopping or paying social calls.

Electric cooking is said by demonstrators to be simpler than other methods. Chickens, turkeys and other roasting meats are cooked to a tempting brown without basting or sacrificing any of their natural flavor. This is due to the fact that electric ovens are as air tight as a fireless cooker and conserve all the delicious juices of the roast.

Saving of the juice [illegible] economy in that it prevents shrinkage of the meat. [illegible] are baked as in other ovens, but vegetables ordinarily boiled may be cooked in an electric oven with [illegible] success and satisfaction.

In the cooking of vegetables there is also a saving of [illegible] and juices [illegible] lost in the steam when boiled.

LITTLE WATER USED

Little water is necessary in the electric cooking of vegetables, which are put in separate containers, made very tight, and the steam generated from the [illegible] in the containers is sufficient to boil them.

Automatic clocks on the ranges may be set to turn the heat on at any time after the food is placed in the oven and to retain the temperature necessary for the cooking. Accurate thermostats regulate the temperature with precision, thus preventing burning and insuring economical operation.

If the temperature [illegible] the thermostat shuts off the current and the oven [illegible] as a fireless cooker until the temperature falls [illegible] when [illegible] turned on. [illegible] through Broad st. and the financial district, and finally tying into the S-1 (North Station) system.

12-INCH MAIN

A [illegible] extension of 12-inch steam main was next installed in [illegible] from Harrison ave., crossing Washington st. into Boylston st. to Boylston sq., where it was connected to an existing 12-inch main in Boylston st. opposite the 39 Boylston st. building. From the opposite end of the existing steam main, a 12-inch line was extended to Tremont st., continuing with [illegible] st. and then [illegible]

[illegible] two extensions, in addition to bolstering this [illegible] system, also permitted [illegible] the heating [illegible] of a Head [illegible] operated up to [illegible] the Kneeland st. station [illegible] service. The latter [illegible] was [illegible] to serve [illegible] Theatre. It is proposed [illegible] 12-inch main in [illegible] through Boylston st. into Park sq. and possibly Back Bay.

PARAMOUNT THEATER

In order to serve the new Paramount Theater, at 553 Washington st., a short eight-inch extension was installed in Avery st. from [illegible] to Avery pl., with a four-inch extension into Avery st. to the Paramount Theater Building.

[illegible] extension of the year [illegible] feet of 16-inch main [illegible] from the S-2 [illegible] existing 11-inch main [illegible]. This extension [illegible] greater assurance of [illegible] service due to its [illegible] additional feeder to [illegible] system. [illegible] differs [illegible] extensions in that [illegible] 70 per cent of [illegible] construction, while the other extensions were entirely of concrete construction.

FOR BACK BAY

Not content with serving downtown Boston with Edison steam the steam heating department is now working on plans for the establishing of a district heating system in Back Bay. This system, which will (for the time being), be more or less centered around the Christian Science buildings, for which the Edison Co. has contracted to supply all present and future steam requirements, will eventually be connected to the present S-2 (downtown) system.

In addition to the 5658 feet of underground steam mains installed during the past year, approximately [illegible] feet of service pipe was also installed to serve numerous new customers from existing mains.

HUB FIRE PUMPS

The City of Boston has expressed confidence in Edison steam service by locating its steam high pressure fire pumps in the Kneeland st. station. The quarters were especially designed for the equipment, and the advantage of connecting the turbines through a short length of pipe into the main steam header capable of supplying 20 times their maximum steam demand is obvious.

An electrical pumping station also serves the high pressure fire mains, which cover the business section of Boston; the pressure being varied according to necessity. With this system, the hose is connected directly to the hydrant, making the use of the fire engine pumps unnecessary. There is an average of 18 alarms monthly, the average running time of which is three minutes.

GIANT TURBINES

In the steam station there are two identical pumps directly connected to 750 horse-power turbines. The turbines take 34,000 pounds of steam per hour at 200 pounds pressure. The pump capacity is 5000 gallons per minute at 100 pounds or 3500 gallons per minute at [illegible] pounds pressure. The pumps can draw water from either of two city water 60 pound mains or from the 100 pound main.

There is a central control panel from which the pumps may be operated and where the signals from fire headquarters arrive through a system of bells, Marconi signals and a recording chart.

All orders are back signaled by the operator and signed on the chart so the chances of error are minimized and responsibility for carrying out orders is fixed.

There is also a signal [illegible] the Kneeland st. plant operator to warn him that the pumps are to be started or stopped.

BEAT WORK BY MIXMASTER

By MARION BROWN

With eggs selling at 12c a dozen and many other cooking ingredients correspondingly low, this is the time to try those angel food cakes, meringues, custards, cream puffs in your cook book. Serving delicious food is an age-old thrill for women, yet the skill and hard work it [illegible] requires has often [illegible] the best of intentions [illegible]. And it's no wonder, either, when you stop to consider all the [illegible] arm work that [illegible] recipes require.

Beat eggs until stiff and whip cream until thick and smooth are [illegible] in most recipes and [illegible] phrases have caused many women to flip over to another page where the work required is easier. Nothing takes the [illegible] out of life quicker than tiresome hand beating and whipping. [illegible] aching arms, tired wrists, weary shoulders.

And that is exactly why Sunbeam Mixmaster has turned out to be such a fast [illegible] appliance for women [illegible] the mixing, mashing, whipping, beating, juice extracting. And not alone that, it does the task so much better and quicker you'll be positively amazed.

THAT'S HOW FAST MY NEW ELECTRIC RANGE IS — SAYS MRS. W. J. D.* OF MATTAPAN . . .

"On Christmas morning, I went down to my kitchen at nine to prepare breakfast. At 9:35, eleven people sat down to fruit, cereal, eggs and bacon, coffee, and two kinds of muffins, all prepared in these few minutes. And everyone loved my food — why even with all those muffins, I had to go and make some more — and served them hot and crispy from my dependable electric oven.

"It is so neat in the kitchen and clean to cook on that it is really a pleasure to prepare meals for my family.

"I use my automatic control a lot, for my social activities take me out in the afternoons, but my suppers are always perfectly prepared every evening when I come home, through this marvelous convenience."

Mrs. D's enthusiasm indicates why over a million American homes have already changed to electricity for cooking.

There is an Edison Shop nearby, where you may see modern electric ranges suited to the cooking requirements of your home and family.

Won't you come in and have us prove to you how fast and clean, convenient and economical, automatic electric cookery really is? (Or, if you prefer, consult your favorite electrical dealer, or retail merchant, who sells electric ranges.)

AUTHOR TELLS OF GARNER'S QUALITIES

New York, March 23 (INS). The human qualities of Speaker Garner, "the busiest man in America," were strikingly pictured to a vast radio audience by Frazer Hunt, well-known author and newspaper correspondent.

Speaking over the WJZ-NBC network last night, Hunt addressed part of his talk to "Aunt Sarah Garner," the speaker's 81-year-old mother, who was listening in back home in Texas. Hunt said:

HAS JOB ON HANDS

"If you don't hear from him as often as you like, 'Aunt Sarah,' don't worry, but remember he is just about the busiest man in America. You see he has only a majority of three Democrats in the House of Representatives, so he has to keep all the machinery oiled up and nicely moving or he won't be able to get anything done."

"Speaker Garner is one of the most popular men in Washington, is shrewd, intelligent, a sharp and witty off-hand debater, has a world of common sense to draw from, and a knack of handling men."

Paying a fine tribute to Mrs. Ettie Garner, the speaker's wife, Hunt said:

LAUDS MRS. GARNER

"She is a fine, kind, motherly woman and the only person in the world who thinks any more of John Garner than she does, may possibly be the little old lady down in Detroit, Texas, who brought him into the world.

"All three of them are real Americans, simple, straightforward, shrewd, intelligent, homely Americans. They are of the finest pioneer type. The blood of a half dozen generations of true Americans flows through their veins. Texas can be proud of them. All America can be proud of them.

"Today, at 62, John Garner is a sturdy, rugged, ruddy-complexioned, blue-eyed 'master of men.' The years have made him tolerant and wise. And his hero is still Andrew Jackson."

MESSAGES OF FATHER COUGHLIN

Poor Losing Confidence in Church, Radio Priest Warns

By ALAN FRAZER

(Copyright, 1932, for the Boston Evening American)

Formidable as it is, Fr. Coughlin's daily heap of mail is a perpetual source of interest to him.

Not only the letters of praise for which he is grateful. Not only the contributions which make it possible to help the poor and continue his broadcasts. Not only the appeals for help which always touch his heart and stir him to action.

Not only these, but also the ones which find fault.

They are few, these complaining letters—about 20 in 10,000 on the average—but sometimes he finds in them the kernels of ideas for subjects to discuss in future sermons, for points to stress, for evils to attack.

ASSISTANTS READ MAIL

He cannot of course read all his mail. That would be impossible. More than 100,000 letters have flowed into Royal Oak since his nation-wide broadcasts began.

But his assistants have been instructed to turn over to him certain types of letters, among them the fault-finding.

With these he has had more than one interesting experience. From one [illegible] he received numerous complaints shortly after his own broadcasts were launched. He read the letters carefully and decided that the writers were prejudiced against what he stood for rather than against him personally or his ideas.

He felt they did not [illegible] and those ideas as yet. He judged that time would bring a change. And so he waited and watched. A careful check was made on the mail from that section.

RESENTMENT VANISHES

Soon a change was noted. Friendly letters in large and increasing numbers began to arrive. Some of the original writers now [illegible] to tell him they had altered their opinions and [illegible] highly valuable.

Before long that [illegible] was sending the same [illegible] of friendly letters that other [illegible] were supplying [illegible] true to his ideas.

Of all his mail, however, there was one type of letter which touched him deeply. Which [illegible] him to take action at the first opportunity. Which led him to point out the way to correct what he considered a damaging impression held by some regarding the part the churches play in present-day life. Damaging to religion [illegible] to the American nation.

"I have discovered the alarming fact that there are too many of our laboring class who are becoming set in their opinion that the churches are the pawns of capitalists and of the agents of wealth," he said.

"Now, let me be quick to state that the Prince of Peace came not into this world to establish hostility between the rich and the poor, between capitalist and laborer.

"Let me be strong in asserting that anyone who attempts to build up animosity between the classes is neither American nor Christian.

URGES AID FOR POOR

"I ask you, therefore, to credit me with that amount of truthfulness which is devoid of both weak sentimentality and intentional exaggeration, when I pass on to you the fact of the existence of this growing mental attitude of the poor and of the working class toward our churches.

"The man or woman who is blind to such a condition, and thereby discounts its irrefutable reality, is nothing more than an ostrich that attempts to hide its head in the sands of selfishness while this spiritual tragedy is being enacted in our midst."

This was the problem—the "spiritual tragedy"—which he had discovered. Which he had [illegible] while he was also learning, as he said:

"That the hearts of the American people are fundamentally sound."

And how would he meet it?

This was his answer:

"If ever there was a time in the history of this generation when there was a necessity on the part of the churches for a duplication of the multiplication of the loaves, that moment has arrived."

Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, radio priest, enjoying a moment of relaxation at a get-together with his parishioners at Royal Oak, Michigan.

"The faults of the past, which have produced our sad predicament, are so much water that has flowed under the bridge of time.

"The promises of the future to relieve our present misery belong to the future.

"The only remedy must be found in multiplying bread for the needy at the present moment."

ACTION NEEDED

He [illegible] practice [illegible]

"We who have learned by rote the corporal and spiritual works of mercy, as enunciated by Jesus Christ, must begin to practice our learning today.

"Otherwise, this growing hostility toward the churches, as has been manifested to me by thousands of letters, this opinion to which I have referred as existing in the minds of too many of our laboring class—will grow and swell like a tidal wave until its destructive force will be immeasurable, both in things religious and in things politic.

"This is a time for action and not for idle boasting of how much gold we possess.

"Let our politicians prate of the fact that our banks are loaded with gold. But let us churchmen be honest enough to admit that the bleak, blighting wind of this cold night is piercing like a sword into the heart and soul of the underfed, the underclothed, the unfortunates of the nation, whose ominous silence is by far a more eloquent protest than we appreciate."

[illegible] he has [illegible]

[illegible]

"Paradoxically as it may sound, the poor man must extend charity (love) to the rich man as well as the rich man must bestow this same virtue upon the laborer."

And now [illegible]

"It is more important that not one American child—no matter what his race or color or creed—shall go unshod, unnourished than it is to spend words and dollars on the present American comedy of experimentation.

"Where and how shall we begin?

CHALLENGE FROM POOR

"I know many churches and religious organizations which already have accepted the challenge from God's poor.

"Although this little church from which I am addressing this vast audience has a debt of approximately $[illegible], which is borne on the shoulders of 64 families who belong to the middle class, it is happy to accept the challenge from the poor.

"It is happy to spread the fire of good example. The spirit of St. Francis is not dead. The spirit of Jesus Christ has not departed. Although we have only five barley loaves and a few fishes, we shall attempt to feed the hungry and clothe the naked.

"We are on the crest of a crisis. It is an emergency which has arisen by whose fault at present is not our concern.

"I repeat, it must not be made a political issue. It is God's issue to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked.

"If every Christian church in this great nation of America will emulate the Franciscan Fathers of [illegible] st., New York, and [illegible] st., Cincinnati, if they will take some Sunday's collection over and above all that they have been giving to the poor or other means, and spend it in the name of the church for the clothing of the destitute, two things will be accomplished.

"This first is the performing of a corporal act of mercy as enunciated by Jesus Christ. The second is the performing of a greater spiritual act of mercy in teaching the poor that they are still cherished and cared for by His church.

"No, we are not gifted with Christ's omnipotence of multiplying five barley loaves so that they are capable of feeding 5000. But we are gifted with the spiritual power of charity. We are supported by a more stupendous miracle according to Christ's promise that 'Whatsoever we do unto the least of His little ones we do unto Him.'

"Of old, He had compassion upon them, hungry and tired as they were, even though the great city about them was filled with festivity.

"Today we, His followers and servants, must be the first to have compassion on the poor.

WORK OF CHURCH

"Let it not be said that Caesar hath surpassed Christ in his charity. Nor that the work which was carried down in Christ's church throughout the centuries has been shuffled upon the shoulders of civic organizations.

"Imagine that there is a knock at your door.

"It is Christ who stands there, wan, cold, hungry and naked. He asks you for help now.

"I know that you will give Him either from your abundance or from your poverty, whatsoever you can spare.

"In reality, the poor are rapping at your door. Your Christian faith tells you that these unfortunates are Christ's brothers and sisters. Whatsoever you do for them you do for Him."

BOOKS—and a Number of Things

By CHARLES HANSON TOWNE

That clever Viennese writer, Ernst Lothar, has produced one of those fascinating Continental novels which proves to be the first volume sent out by the new publishing firm of H. C. Kinsey Co. It is entitled "The Clairvoyant," and it holds the interest from beginning to end with its mixture of reality and fancy. I began it with some misgivings, but soon found myself racing along, eager to see what would happen next. That is all one can ask of a story.

A young man, giant in stature, comes from the rural district to make his way in a banking firm. He is clumsy and crude and is immediately the butt of his fellow clerks, who smile at his simple ways, his manner of dress, his ignorance of cosmopolitan ways. He proves a good target for [illegible] in order to off[illegible] he gives an exhibition of a strange power which he possesses.

He is able merely by looking at an [illegible] to tell everything concerning the person who has put pen to paper. He can even, when blindfolded and merely feeling the [illegible] on the page, peer into the future [illegible] of the writer. A robbery has recently occurred in the bank and he innocently reveals the name of the thief.

The leading officer of the bank invites him to a soiree, and after a pianist has performed and a singer has rendered several songs, young Sebastian Trix is called upon to exercise his uncanny powers. [illegible] sophisticated company [illegible] and foretells the death, a few days hence, of a [illegible] ago, than he had predicted [illegible] exactly [illegible]

[illegible] he was playing in a [illegible] company, and he had the leading role in a comedy [illegible] called for a man of exceptional appearance. All the women on the stage [illegible] before he came on. There was a line just before his entrance which read: "He looks like a Greek god."

The actor had enough sense of humor to realize that when he made his appearance the audience would burst into shouts of laughter, for he was anything but Greek, with his snub nose and plump cheeks and diminishing black hair. This line would have to be changed. Yet it was discovered that a contract with the author made it imperative that not one word of the text should be altered. Nothing had been said, however, about punctuation, and so the actor advised the leading lady to utter her line thus:

"He looks like a Greek. God!"

And speaking of the stage, one remembers the wit of the late Emily Stevens, who was called upon by a simple little girl from the provinces seeking advice as to a theatrical career.

"Do you think, Miss Stevens," the girl naively inquired, "that the stage is a bad place for good little girls?"

"Not half so bad as good little girls are for the stage," said Miss Stevens.

The other day I ran into Irvin Cobb on the street and we got to talking about recent books. It is Mr. Cobb who modestly calls himself, in literature, a mere journeyman, a tinker, but I think he is far more than that.

Mr. Cobb was on his way to lunch, and his day's work of three hours was over.

"Some of the greatest authors, like the great composers," he said, "stick at it longer than I do; and then again, fellows like Will Lengel work eight years on one novel. Did you happen to read his 'Forever and Ever,' which he wrote under the name of Warren Spencer? It's bully stuff," he added enthusiastically. I told him I had read it and admired it for its bitter truth.

"You see," added Mr. Cobb, "Lengel holds down an editorial job, and in order to produce a book he had to steal his evening hours to get it done. I envy these chaps. They're made of the right stuff. It's only the little fellows who don't know how to arrange their time. Bill Lengel will go far. He's got it in him. But I'm hungry. And I'm glad I don't have to work evenings. Goodbye!"

That is the miracle of the Arch Preserver Shoe! You enjoy a degree of foot comfort obtainable in no other shoe—and still your feet are so smartly styled that fashion-conscious women envy you.

Exclusive features of Arch Preserver Shoes actually prevent and correct many foot troubles. Have been doing it for years and years right here in Boston.

Arch Preserver Shoes are constructed scientifically on lasts that follow Nature's own plan. The arch is rigid—never sags or breaks. The tread across the ball of the foot is perfectly flat—so that toes cannot be squeezed together, torturing muscles and nerves.

And there is the famous metatarsal support that restores the forward arch of the foot to its normal functioning.

The new, spring styles are in. Most of the new Arch Preserver Shoes are priced at the new low level of 8.50—others at 10.50

'The Crime That Couldn't Happen' » The Lindbergh Kidnaping

Gang Too Smart to Use Tactics Revealed by Investigators

By WIN BROOKS

Chapter VI

Was the Lindbergh [illegible] an inside [illegible] bungled the [illegible] it? [illegible]

Kidnapers smart enough to remain unfound would [illegible] an undertaking requiring entering that home, also be smart enough to strike in the dead of night rather than early evening, when [illegible] and all of the [illegible] would be here, there and everywhere throughout the [illegible] the whole countryside [illegible] even a goose would know enough to cut the telephone wires.

Too Bold to Be Real

3 Men in Audacious [illegible] With [illegible]

"Kidnapers well posted would know the Lindbergh baby was not well at the time and naturally they would reason that someone would be near the sick child until late at night when [illegible] retired.

"It is strange that smart kidnapers would [illegible] the [illegible] risk of a sick kidnaped child on their hands who might need professional medical attention or die before ransom could be obtained.

"The world is asked to [illegible] a ladder and flashlight parade taking place just after 8 p. m. right up to the Lindbergh house. The 'firemen' swing into action with the ladder, pull off a 'rescue' through an upstairs window, right in the open and march away unseen.

Three strangers on foot bent on evil unsensed, unscented, undetected by a dog which is so [illegible] and possesses [illegible] super-sensibilities, one or all of which would have been stirred even if the dog was in the house on the side away from such unusual goings-on.

"It is the evil intent of strangers, and the unusual, that unfailingly stir dog senses on the home lot, especially after dark. [illegible]

These persons were on the night of March 1 Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh and the baby, Betty Gow, the baby's nurse, the butler, who [illegible] also named Whateley, and the butler's wife.

What Is Your Theory?

What is your theory of the Lindbergh kidnaping puzzle which has aroused the entire world and which has baffled the collected police talent of the nation? Your theory [illegible] Lindbergh Case Editor, the Boston Evening American.

What of 3 Servants?

Here Is the Pro and Con of Many Theories

[illegible]

In the beginning there is the positive proof that the kidnaper knew where the baby slept. [illegible]

[illegible]

dow and are we all not commonly careless about securing windows above the ground floor? In the winter [illegible] in the many houses without [illegible] there is no means of having the windows barred and having fresh air in the room at one and the same time.)

The kidnaper knew the height of the window from the ground.

(Anybody who had at any time been close to the house could have learned that distance.)

The kidnaper knew which particular blind was unsecured.

(Also, the presence of the chisel and the fact that the blind was slightly ajar indicate he did not know until he reached the scene.)

Observant Kidnaper

Some Theories Against an Inside Job Belief

The kidnaper knew that the family was remaining in Hopewell on a Tuesday night, which was contrary to its custom.

(But the kidnaping did not happen [illegible] after 8 o'clock and anyone in the vicinity of the home must have known by the lights in the house that the family was still there.)

The above parenthetical remarks are intended merely to show that these indications of an inside job may have been only the result of close observation by the kidnaper.

There are two other suspicious indications, namely, the absence from the nursery of the little dog on the particular night of the kidnaping and the fact that the baby was not kidnaped on Saturday or Sunday night when Betty Gow, its nurse, was in Englewood.

[illegible] a combination of all these [illegible] and particularly of the [illegible] probably which has [illegible] in the continued questioning of Miss Gow's friend, Red Johnson [illegible] the failure of police in three weeks' time to eliminate definitely the possibility of it having been an inside job.

Now what indications are there that it was NOT an inside job?

[illegible] one is that the baby was taken at a time when it was [illegible] a cold.

Another is the very manner in which the baby was stolen. If it were an inside job there were many better opportunities for the kidnaper than when the parents were present.

[illegible] there is one consideration which may have entered the mind of the kidnaper if it were an inside job, and that is that there would be less suspicion directed at the "inside" guilty person if the abduction were accomplished while the parents were present.

Then there seem to be only two conclusions left open, viz., (1) that the kidnaper did have information or active aid from someone within the house, or (2) that he, or a confederate, was well acquainted with the layout of the home and had it under close observation.

No amount of outside observation could have told the kidnaper the dog was not in the nursery at the hour when the plot was carried out.

Yet outside observation would have told him of the arrival of the nurse, on the afternoon immediately preceding the kidnaping, and under ordinary circumstances the presence of the nurse would increase the danger to the success of the plot. Was it a coincidence that the kidnaper waited till Miss Gow arrived before he struck?

There is a fine sense of balance and counterbalance between the indications, and if the scale seems to lean more heavily on the side of an inside job, is it not counteracted by three weeks of police investigation at the home, during which they have failed to reveal collusion from within the household?

TOMORROW: MOTIVES

The kidnaper knew the family was staying in Hopewell on a Tuesday night which was contrary to custom

Theories of Readers

ROYALTY DID IT

"The baby was on the high seas beyond the 12-mile limit within two hours from the time he was taken from his crib. Small craft leaving port with tramp crews are not manned by men of superior moral sense. Did it ever occur to you that the baby was kidnaped, or caused to be kidnaped by a family of royal blood in some other country who wanted to replace a backward offspring of imbecile parents? The good red blood of the peasantry has found its way into many a royal family under such circumstances."—Parker House.

JEALOUSY

"It seems to me this is a case of jealousy or revenge."—M. I. D., Franklin st., Somerville.

IN THE WOODS

"My theory is that the baby may be hidden in some house or shack in the woods surrounding the Lindbergh estate. Search has been made there but in my opinion it has not been thorough enough. The kidnapers would have found it difficult to proceed many hundreds of miles with the cordon of police and detectives surrounding the scene so soon after the crime. Every foot of that wooded region within 500 miles of the home should be gone over by [illegible] woodsmen."—Newton.

ONE OR TWO ALLIES

"My theory [illegible] was done by [illegible] men [illegible] by one man [illegible] acquainted with the [illegible] house [illegible] mechanic who was [illegible] construct [illegible] man built the [illegible] and supplied the chisel. [illegible] child is being [illegible] this work [illegible] and that he is [illegible] to proceed without [illegible] himself."—[illegible] Ormond st., M[illegible].

FOR RANSOM

"The person who took the Lindbergh baby took it for ransom, but I think it will be returned without payment of ransom."—M. M., Arlington Heights.

PROFESSIONAL

"My theory is that there was too much talk of the death penalty or life imprisonment for kidnaping just when the kidnapers were about to negotiate for ransom. I feel it is the work of a professional who is in hiding, waiting promise of immunity."—Mary J. Gamache, 10 Chesley pl., Quincy.

INSIDE JOB

"I think it was an inside job and that the baby was handed through the window to the culprit on the outside. It seems very strange that the pet dog was not in its little master's room."—Mrs. Mary Phillips, High st., Amesbury.

NOT RANSOM

"The baby wasn't taken for ransom. The kidnaper was well informed of the movements of the family and knew the layout of the house and grounds and made the ladder to reach the window and made it in three sections so it could be carried in an auto."—S. J. McGrath, 81 Prescott st., Cambridge.

ENTER THE SIMIAN

"Look for a tame monkey or gorilla and a man or woman who has one. A monkey might have been trained to go and get the baby."—R. M. M., Boston.

THE REPUBLICANS

"Republican party leaders did it because they plan to run Lindbergh for vice president."—Thomas J. Killilea, 214 Lexington st., Waverly.

TRIES TO END LIFE ON MOTHER'S GRAVE

THIS IS LIFE

DISTANCE LENDS STRENGTH TO FINER FEELINGS AMONG HUMANS

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

PROF. ROGERS

GUY MURCHIE SAID, when he graduated from Harvard a year or two ago "I must find out for myself whether it is not ignorance, and ignorance alone, that prevents friendship and understanding between these masses of human beings. I cannot commit myself to doubt or distrust of other men on hearsay. I want to come to some workable conclusions about this variegated world of men, and I can't do that until I have encountered it at first hand in the raw."

So he started off on a trip around the world, keeping north of the Equator; Alaska, Japan, Manchuria and northern China, and Soviet Russia. He took little or no money with him. He worked his way at odd and dirty jobs. He made friends with all whom he met. American workingmen and sailors and doughboys, Japanese of the lower class, laboring and traveling Chinese, White Russians living in exile, and the populace of Soviet Russia. He had a bully time with them all. He saw them all humorously and apparently many of them saw him humorously. He found the comic side to their manners and customs, their housekeeping, their railroad trains, and their baths—especially their baths! The passages on Japanese public bathing, public or private, are very funny indeed and are highly recommended to my namesakes out in Rogers Park, Chicago, who are greatly alarmed over the proposed introduction of Nudism in the chaste Windy City.

Competition at Close Quarters

He illustrated the book in his own amateur and inimitable manner, reminding me much of Edward Lear's illustrations to his own Limericks, or H. G. Wells' attempts at illustration, or Dr. Doolittle, or Newton Newkirk's hand-made sketches for "Stealthy Steve," lo these many years agone. Funny, I mean to say, without being vulgar.

And Mr. Murchie came back, apparently, with the firm conviction that all that is necessary for world peace is world fraternity. If everybody could only get together with everybody else, eat with them, sleep with them, bathe with them, und so weiter, everybody would love everybody else and Geneva could rent itself out as a summer resort. If you don't believe me—and Mr. Murchie you will find it all set forth in "Men on the Horizon," (Houghton & Mifflin).

But old Uncle Schopenhaur has his doubts! Is it true that all that is needed is acquaintanceship to make people like one another and keep the peace? Scientific observation (see Schimmelpfennig's "History of the Human Family") would seem to deny such. Common knowledge tells us that the larger the family and the smaller the apartment, and therefore the closer the acquaintance, the greater the chances of friction. Even if bathing conditions approximate the Japanese, the row over the early morning ablution may often reach the proportions of Shanghai peaceful penetration.

No, peace does not come from closer acquaintance but from absence of competition, of clashing ambitions, of disputed goals and so on. The real reason we get on as well as we do with our foreign neighbors is that, after all, we don't know much about them. And the real reason we can raise a good row at home whenever we feel like it, is that we know a lot too much about our frinds, neighbors and relatives. We know that they will do us in if they can. So we watch 'em careful and suspicious and, in the words of Kipling's old shipping magnate, "we keep our light so shining a little in front o' the next."

Another thing, Mr. Murchie was traveling. His jobs were casual and incidental and momentary. He was on his good behavior, as everybody is when travelling. No wonder he loved everybody and everybody loved him.

• • •

Travel Brings Relaxation

Now when I am traveling I am the same way. I am for the moment relaxed, on my best behavior, out to have a good time. Butter would not melt in my mouth. I beam. I smile. I am courteous, obliging, companionable. I carry grips for old ladies and hold babies for bothered mothers. I direct young women to The Travelers' Aid Society and see that they go there, whether they wish to or not. I tip porters lavishly with words of Christian cheer. I exchange cheerful but wholesome badinage with dining car waiters. I lend stranded men in the smoking room matches and discarded newspapers and tell them the names of the best hotels in places I have never visited. I shake hands with the engineer, to his undisguised astonishment. Old and young, rich and poor call down blessings on my head and vow to remember the kind and jolly gentleman in their prayers. But that is because I am traveling. I have no axes to grind. I have nothing to sell. I am in competition with nobody.

But when my Chief calls a department meeting at the Institute and a proposal is made to cut out my favorite course and substitute the favorite course of somebody else, do you see any of this sweetness and light being passed round? You do not! You see the undersigned giving a fine imitation of Horace Lorimer's fiction hero, old J. Gorgon Graham, old poker face, chewing a black cigar, playing them close to his chest, and out for scalps. Why? Because it is my occupation which is in question, my profession, my bread and butter, my pride and reputation and self esteem. That is why..

Young Mr. Murchie can travel round the world till he trips over his whiskers but he won't learn anything about people that way. He can travel in first class or steerage, in the Minute Man or in that closely populated menagerie he called a Chinese train. And so long as he is not competing with these people, he will find them swell, and will believe that therein lies universal peace.

But wait till he comes home and settles down in the old street, and takes a job with some of his classmates, and joins a club and a church. Let him start something then that he thinks ought to be started but that steps on somebody's toes. Then he will wish he were back in Japan where everything is jake and everybody bathes together and all is love.

Meantime, the next best thing might be to try to syndicate those Japanese chapters in a Shanghai newspaper. It might cheer up those people to realize how really likeable after all the Japanese are.

Although they were both dangerously burned in a gasoline blast on the dump near Ralston st., South Boston, Chester Zarnoch, 9, of Rogers st., and Paul Strobis, 8, of Gifford st., both South Boston, were removed from Carney Hospital to their homes today, over the protests of police and hospital authorities.

THIEF IS CAUGHT BY GIRL, JAILED

Charles Bux of the Fenway, Back Bay, was given two terms of one year each in the House of Correction to be served concurrently when he pleaded guilty in Superior Court today to two handbag snatchings.

Dorothy Woglom

Miss Dorothy Woglom, 21, a pretty blonde of Franklin st., Melrose, testified that while she was seated in the North Station Washington's Birthday, the lights had gone out and when they came on again her handbag had vanished.

She saw Bux hurrying out of the train and she chased him into the West End, where he was captured by two taxi drivers. Bux, at this point changed his plea [illegible]

He also pleaded guilty to theft of a handbag from an elderly woman in the downtown section, for which he had also been arrested.

AUTO THIEVES HOLD DRIVER AT GUNPOINT

Escape With Paine Machine After Battling Chauffeur on Runningboard

Holding the chauffeur of the machine powerless at gunpoint, two thugs today made a getaway with the automobile of Mrs. James L. Paine of Cambridge, wife of a prominent State st. trustee, from Arlington and Marlboro sts., Boston.

The chauffeur, Harold Benedict of Willow ave., Somerville, surprised the two as they were about to drive away. Benedict had driven Mrs. Paine to a luncheon in the Back Bay and had gone to a nearby store for cigarettes when he returned and found the two in the car.

Jumping to the running board, he grabbed the man sitting behind the wheel and he attempted to grapple with and drag him from the machine.

The other man pulled a revolver from his pocket and levelling it at Benedict, said:

Benedict stepped back from the car and the two sped away.

Summoning Mrs. Paine from the luncheon, Benedict told her the story. Both went to police headquarters where they made a report. Benedict said that the car went in the direction of Massachusetts ave. An immediate search of the district failed to reveal trace of the car.

NORTON BURIAL IN ARLINGTON

Beside the brother whose death drove him to suicide, Maj. Henry L. Norton of Winthrop will be buried Friday in the National Cemetery at Arlington, Va.

Maj. Norton shot himself through the heart yesterday after brooding since October over the death of Col. Paul Norton, wartime commander of the 101th Infantry and former secretary of the boxing commission.

The body will be escorted by Winthrop Post, American Legion, to South Station, Thursday night, and placed on a train to go to the [illegible] capital.

Stock and Bond Lists Impounded

The list of stocks and bonds held by the savings and commercial departments of the closed Medford Trust Co. were impounded until Friday by Judge William C. Waite in State Supreme Court, yesterday.

Receiver Miles J. Ferrick, sought the impounding on the basis that if the court allowed sale of some of the securities, general knowledge of them would tend to depress the market and result in realization of lower prices for them.

Governor to Attend Launching of Liner

Governor Ely may submit some nominations at today's Executive Council meeting, but he said they will not include one for a judge of the Superior Court to fill a vacancy caused by the promotion of Judge Charles H. Donahue to the Supreme Bench.

The governor leaves this afternoon for Camden, N. J., to attend a launching there tomorrow of a steamship for the Panama and South American trade.

STILLMANS IN REUNION

MRS. M'CORMICK

"BUD" STILLMAN MRS. STILLMAN

The former "Fifi" Stillman, now Mrs. Fowler McCormick, arrived in Boston today for a reunion with her two sons, "Bud" Stillman and Alexander, the latter a freshman at Harvard, and Bud's wife and baby daughter. It was the first time Mrs. McCormick has seen her granddaughter since the child was named Leanne, a combination of her mother's and grandmother's names. (Staff Photos.)

Grandma Fifi Thinks New Babe's Name Is 'Lovely'

A youthful appearing "Grandma's" hearty endorsement was placed today [illegible] Leanne for the first-born of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Mrs. Anne [illegible] McCormick arrived in Boston from Chicago.

"Fifi" came to Boston with a two-fold purpose to cuddle again her new granddaughter, and to visit "Fifi's" bachelor and collegiate son Alexander, a freshman at Harvard "the one that's going to be a banker," according to the mother's declaration.

When "Fifi" alighted from the 20th Century Limited at Huntington ave. station, Alexander's sports and expensive roadster was waiting for her, as was the liveried chauffeur.

LOVELY NAME, SHE SAYS

"Fifi" apeared to be in haste to get away in the car, but she halted for a moment when greeted by newspapermen and smiled when asked what she thought of the name Leanne [illegible] daughter of Eric and [illegible] Lena Wilson of the Canadian wilds.

"I think that's a lovely name, don't you?" she flashed as she stepped into the roadster. Then it whirled away—to where, no one could discover for hours, although it was neither immediately to Alexander's rooms at Harvard nor to "Bud's" home in Newell rd., Brookline.

[illegible] marrying Fowler McCormick, her son "Bud's" chum when Fowler was 32 revealed her life's philosophy as she departed Chicago for Boston—stating it in three words "love, energy, courage." Of the three, she asserted, the greatest is love.

LOVE IS HER PHILOSOPHY

"Don't you think my philosophy is a good one?" she asked. "Of course, you have to know how to love. You have to be unselfish. That's what I mean.

"You have to love generously. Above all, let people be themselves. If you do that you have solved all of love's problems."

Fowler McCormick, said Mrs. McCormick as she departed the LaSalle st. station in Chicago, is [illegible] her custom to go visiting relatives when her husband is called away.

This young-appearing grandmother was attractively attired in a mink coat, brown hat and brown shoes.

MEDFORD MAN NOW WANTS TO LIVE

Puts Bullet in Chest Standing Over the Spot in Lynn Where Parents Lie

A bullet that he fired into his heart as he stood on the grave of his father and mother, in Pine Grove Cemetery, Lynn, today, made George Johnson, 50, of Medford, realize that life is better than death.

Johnson, his chest partly torn away by a 38-caliber bullet, walked up to Fred Snow, cemetery custodian, and said:

"I've just shot myself. Get me to a hospital. I thought I wanted to die. But now I would rather live."

Snow rushed from the cemetery and hailed a passing truck and had Johnson transferred to the Lynn Hospital, where physicians said he would probably die.

Johnson told police he had brooded more than seven years over the death of his mother. He said he went to the cemetery this morning with the intention of ending his life on her grave.

HARVARD FEATS AMONG STARS

The remarkable development of astronomical photography at Harvard, dating back more than 80 years, was [illegible] Annie J. Cannon, curator of astronomical photographs at Harvard Observatory, speaking at the dedication of the new astrophotographic building.

The first photograph of a star ever taken was made in 1850 with the 15-inch equatorial telescope said Dr. Cannon. The earliest plates were daguerrotypes, taken under the direction of William C. Bond, first director of Harvard Observatory. At that time only the brightest luminaries in the heavens could be reproduced in pictures. No impression could hae made of the North Star, no matter how long the exposure.

In 1857 with the introduction of the "wet" collodion plates, George P. Bond son of the first director, succeeded in photographing stars of the sixth magnitude.

Since that time, Dr. Cannon revealed, developments in photography and improved telescopes have made it possible to photograph [illegible] in the 14th and 15th magnitude [illegible]

Burke Urges Water Purifying Be Rushed

Mayor John H. Burke of Medford [illegible] to appeal to the Metropolitan District Commission today in an effort to have the work of clarifying the drinking water in that city hurried along. Mayor Burke's action comes as a result of hundreds of complaints from citizens who maintain that the water is no better now than it was when the Spot Pond reservoir was first treated with chemicals.

$10,000 Award for Death of Girl, 15

A Middlesex Superior Civil Court jury awarded Stanley Zakauskas [illegible] $10,000 in connection with the death of his daughter, Ruth, 15. The girl died March 13, 1929, from injuries suffered when she was struck by an auto operated by Joseph W. Weiss of Woburn.

Confession of Doctor Read by Colt

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

At 11:30 on New Year's Eve, Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt arrives at the exclusive Mayfair Club in response to a mysterious summons from District Attorney Merle Dougherty. The latter [illegible] Carewe, known as "The Night Club Lady," widow of [illegible] Gifford [illegible] responsible for a series of jewel robberies perpetrated recently which baffle the police. Lola is slain mysteriously in her apartment. Christine is later found dead. Colt orders dust in room analyzed. Parts of a scorpion are found. Dr. Baldwin is the next victim of mysterious death. He leaves a confession.

NOW READ ON—

COLT AND I sat down and read Dr. Baldwin's statement as follows:

"I am leaving this memorandum because I fully realize that I may be put out of the way by my enemies—or that I may yet decide to end my worthless life. In either case I want the truth to be known. I say my enemies, but I should say Christine Quires and Lola Carewe. I do not intend to lose my life at the whim of these two vampires in human form or go out without leaving behind me the evidence that shall revenge my murder. And it is likely that if I do go suddenly and violently, it will be murder.

RELATIONSHIP TO VICTIMS

"The facts of my relationship with these two women are simple and direct enough. I was the physician for Mr. Gifford, the husband of Lola Carewe. Mr. Gifford was not a very ill man at the time of his marriage. He suffered from indigestion and I treated him for this with a simple remedy. But upon one occasion I wrote a prescription and through some incalculable fragment of circumstance which deflected my attention at the time I was writing the prescription, I wrote down an ingredient which I had no intention of ordering. The combination which I had prescribed resulted, therefore, in a poisonous dose. The fact is that I, his trusted physician, killed Mr. Gifford.

"Of course, I did not intend to kill him. But he did die solely as a result of my carelessness. When I realized what had happened, I was struck dumb with horror. I had always been an honorable practitioner. I have often heard the joke that doctors bury their mistakes. I know that honorable doctors do nothing of the kind. I went directly to the widow, whom the world now knows as Lola Carewe, and told her what I had done. She took pity on me with what seemed to me then a great compassion. She told me that she could find it in the heart to forgive and forget, but that she felt in justice to herself I should write out a statement and give it to her.

BECAME LOLA'S SLAVE

"This I did. I thought the matter was over. The door was closed on that incident and I breathed freely. In a little while, I was to me as if it had never happened. But how wrong I was! Suddenly I had to open that door in my life again. For Lola Carewe now began to take advantage of my position to hold over me a power that practically made me her slave. She made me invest my savings in her worthless schemes. And worse than that she had me do!

"At the time her husband died, I had the moral courage to face the world and acknowledge my mistake. I could have begun life all over again—if not in my profession, then in some other work where new success did not depend upon the trust of people who would commit their safety, their very lives, to my hands. In the exaltation of my remorse I could have given up being a doctor and started life anew. But now that inspired mood had passed. I had been forgiven. I did not have the courage to defy Lola when she made these demands on me. Now my career, my profession, my work, had become dearer to me than anything else. I am a good physician and I am proud of my record in spite of that one fatal mistake. But I have been a weak tool in this woman's hands.

"It was thus that I came to know the real mystery of Lola

POLICE ORDERED TO SHOOT DOWN GUNMEN WHO SHOW FIGHT

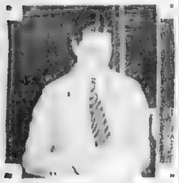
BY CANDID CAMERA

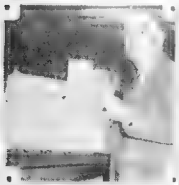
The fellow who is carrying me about on this job doesn't own an automobile. However, I'm happy that he has motor ideas. So into the headquarters of the Registry of Motor Vehicles on Commonwealth Pier we hopped.

So I met Registrar Morgan Ryan. He greets an average of 200 motorists daily. He does a grand job to keep our decent driving folk happy. He is unrelenting on careless motorists.

When you want a driver's license you first see Miss Aileen O'Brien. She looks over your application. Advises you of any errors and after rectifying same the application is passed on.



This is Edward McDonough, cashier, who takes your fee and signs order that is to bring you the desired plates for your machine.



After you talk with James Cogan, who hands your plates, you walk out into the world and go on your way a motorist. Cogan keeps a record of all who receive plates.

KISS BATTLING SECRETARY AGAIN TALKS

Miss Isabelle Hatch, Andover stenographer, named as co-respondent in the MacMillian divorce suit in East Cambridge court continues her testimony today. She is discussing the case with her attorney, J. Bradley Mahoney.

Mrs. Marie MacMillan, who claimed she has reason for divorce in that she found her husband and his secretary, Miss Hatch, in their office, clad in very little clothes as she made surprise visit. She seeks divorce.

Miss Hatch on Monday told of how she fought off kisses of Donald J. MacMillan, her employer. She couldn't recall how many times she had been kissed despite her battle to avoid her boss' lips.

TEACHERS' JOBS ARE SAFE

The plans of the Boston School Board to cut the budget by approximately $[illegible] below the amount expended last year has given rise to reports that the teaching staff had been curtailed, but this is denied by William A. Reilly, chairman of the board, and by Dr. Charles F. Mackey.

Chairman Reilly stated that the report that [illegible] temporary teachers had been dropped Friday was untrue.

"There was a proposal," he said, "to drop a number of teachers who were filling what might be called permanent substitute places, but we found that at least [illegible] of them happened to be the sole support of their families. Under the present trying conditions we decided to retain them.

"There has been no reduction in the number of teachers. We have decided to retain the full quota of teachers and substitutes and economize in supplies. The board will not cut salaries or deny the customary increases earned by length of service. The teachers need not fear that the board is going to economize at their expense."

SECRETARY ON STAND AGAIN

Hearing of the divorce suit of Mrs. Marie MacMillan of Cambridge against Donald J. MacMillan will be resumed today before Judge Colin C. Campbell in Middlesex Probate Court.

MacMillan is not contesting the suit but Miss Isabelle Hatch of Andover, MacMillan's secretary, who is named as corespondent, is [illegible] a defense of her reputation.

Miss Hatch was on the stand when the hearing adjourned Monday and is expected to continue her testimony when the case resumes today.

On the stand Monday she admitted that MacMillan frequently tried to kiss her and had succeeded several times.

Probe of Newton Blaze Launched

Officials are investigating a fire that swept a block of stores at 241 [illegible] Adams st., Newton, causing damage estimated at $[illegible]. It was the [illegible] fire to occur there within a few months.

The blaze started in a shoe repairing establishment and spread to an adjoining barber shop.

LIGHT BETRAYS INTRUDER

Attracted by the flicker of a light in the empty dwelling house on Hanover ave., North End, patrolman Joseph Gileo entered the house and found a man who gave his name as Philip Rinone, 23, of Harvey st., East Boston, breaking lead pipe with an axe.

Patrolman Gileo arrested Rinone and booked him on a charge of breaking and entering and larceny.

Rinone told the police that he had been unable to find work and thought that he might collect enough lead pipe to sell to junk men to make a living.

He procured an axe and was breaking down the plumbing by candle light when caught. The officer said he found about 100 pounds of lead piled on the floor.

2-YEAR COURSE IN ACADEMICS DEPLORED

Harvard Head Addresses Alumni of Wesleyan; Sees Need of Character Building

Retention of the four-year system of academic study as used in New England colleges, was urged by President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard, in addressing members of the Wesleyan University Alumni Association.

Speaking at the University Club last night, Pres. Lowell contrasted the methods employed at New England colleges with those of certain State universities in the West where students are required to spend only two years in academic study before entering professional courses.

He admitted that this idea was wise for many students but expressed the opinion that the four-year academic course was wise for an equally great number of students.

"We can give these men in these four years something they can get in no other way, something they cannot get in the professions, something they cannot get in business," he said. "This is a combination of the essentially spiritual qualities that make men great, the things that are elevating, that build character and create a broad sympathy and understanding of the mind."

He pointed out that the only difficulty in dispensing this type of education lies with the student on whom education must be forced. The only true education was self-education, he pointed out.

How to Escape FLU and Grippe

1 Avoid so far as possible the places where germs are most likely to be spread; over-crowded cars and public meeting places; stuffy, poorly ventilated rooms.

2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers; breathe through the nose, get fresh air but avoid drafts or chilling.

3 Get lots of rest. Drink plenty of water. Keep the bowels open. Take extra precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have normal resistance against germs.

4 Try, particularly to avoid catching cold. Colds lower your resistance to disease germs. At the first sign of any cold, take Bayer Aspirin and remain indoors if possible until your cold is gone. Gargle with Bayer Aspirin dissolved in water at the first touch of sore throat, as this relieves the soreness and usually reduces the inflammation.

5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor at once.

'PUTTING LOVE ON THE SPOT' IS HER LONG SUIT

By HELEN ROWLAND

THE ONLY PERSON in the world who can kill a man's love for a woman is the woman, herself.

• • •

Women may "warn him against her," men may point out her defects and vamps may try to steal him from her. But as long as she keeps her head, her temper and her tongue and does nothing to dispel the glamour, nobody can wake him up. He's hers, until she cuts the wire, turns off the current or sounds the alarm.

NOBODY CAN WAKE HIM UP
'SHE'S WONDER-FUL!'

• • •

But 'putting love on the spot' is woman's [illegible] her metier! And there are a thousand ways in which [illegible] can manage to wreck a romance.

• • •

Another weapon with which many a woman cuts her own throat is her tongue. She just loves to TELL a man things—everything! She can't be content to remain a hazy dream in his mind. She has to tell him "all ABOUT herself"—her life, her temperament, her reducing diet, and sometimes even the source of her complexion and where she buys her clothes.

• • •

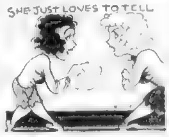
Many a woman has TALKED [illegible] and [illegible] ceased to be [illegible] dream [illegible] become just an ordinary human being.

• • •

Then, there's the feminine faculty for starting a scrap. One scrap will do more to kill romance than the breaking of all the Ten Commandments. You may kiss-and-make-up; but something between you—the perfect understanding, the entente cordiale—has been snapped and can never be quite the same again.

• • •

Still another way of snuffing the fire out of a [illegible] ardor is by making a scene. A woman who makes a man conspicuous makes him ridiculous—and no man can forgive or forget that.



SHE JUST LOVES TO TELL

• • •

And there's the clever woman's temptation to be witty, at a man's expense. Positively fatal! And the silly woman's way of hanging on a man's neck and wailing that he doesn't love her, until she chokes all the enthusiasm out of him.

• • •

O[illegible] there are a thousand ways of 'putting love on the spot.' [illegible] once a woman has landed a man's affections [illegible] can't she keep a cool head, a sweet temper and a [illegible] tongue—and let him go ON loving her? Why can't [illegible] be STILL!

Health Slogan: 'Great to Be Straight!'

Dr. Copeland

A LEADING college for women recently held a posture contest. This is an annual event and arouses great interest. The [illegible] have adopted the slogan [illegible] great to be straight. [illegible] that the [illegible] about this slogan could be realized by everyone, and that more attention would be paid to the importance of posture.

Many persons do not hold themselves properly. They walk in a slouchy manner. They pay no attention to the importance of good posture while standing, sitting or walking. This is unfortunate because good body posture is important to health.

Faulty posture is a [illegible] cause of many physical [illegible]. Nausea, headache, lack of appetite, "biliousness" and nervousness are a few of the minor complaints caused by poor posture. Constipation, a common complaint, is often overcome by correcting body posture.

When you walk draw in your abdomen, chest [illegible], head high and square and [illegible] straight forward. Do not hold yourself in an awkward position but be thoroughly relaxed, with the arms swinging as you walk. If you want to be sure that your posture is correct, remember this: If an imaginary plumb line were dropped from the side of the head, it should pass through the ear and the middle of [illegible] hip, knee and ankle bone.

Always sit in a comfortable chair and never slouch or [illegible] over a table. Flatten the bones of the back by rolling the hip bones backward and downward.

It is now an accepted fact that many of the diseases and deformities of later life are caused by neglecting to correct faulty posture in childhood.

MURDER OF THE NIGHT CLUB LADY

Dr. Baldwin Bares Life of Lola

Carewe. I was one of the few men in New York who ever knew the truth about her. Of course I did not know all. Probably no one but Lola could claim that sinister distinction. But I knew enough to understand the amazing practices which she introduced into New York. I learned how Lola kept herself unceasingly in funds, although she was notoriously one of the most extravagant women in New York.

"Lola Carewe was a blackmailer. That was the only card she knew how to play. She would not gamble or steal, and I do not believe she had it in her heart to love any man. No other crime interested her except extortion. In that grisly and awful business she seemed to take an unholy pleasure. From this came her money, in a secret underground river of gold. The number of men and women in New York City who have paid tribute to this blackmailing beauty would astonish the rest of the town.

"Lola introduced no fancy sleights of her own into her blackmailing schemes. She used the time-worn methods. She first led her victim into some vicious practice or pursuit, got overwhelming evidence, and then bled him for the rest of his life. It is a game probably as old as the Roman courtesans. There is nothing new in it. But it continues to be terribly effective.

"How then did I fit into such a picture? How could I help her in her infamous conduct? The answer is simple and horrible. I provided drugs for her friends. She seduced and made them everlasting victims of cocaine, morphine, hasheesh and opium. She generally began with the use of marihuana cigarettes. I provided the drugs. I was in her power, the only power that she understood or cared to use, and she blackmailed me into giving her victims the drugs they demanded. Later, she did not care whether I gave them drugs or not—all that she wanted, then, was to get money. If it were not forthcoming, wife or husband was betrayed, homes wrecked—it was seldom that her levy was not paid on time.

"This is the woman to whom I have been shackled in an unholy pact for the last several years. Will it seem to be strange if I confess that she has exercised over me a horrible and fantastic influence. How can we desire that which has made us suffer torment? No psychoanalytical theory has made that mystery clear to me, for the answer lies only in word and I suffer in my nerves and tissues. I am a home-loving man. I dearly love my wife and children. I could be happy and content making a modest living for them and living out my life in the quiet paths of my profession. It is Lola who has broken my wife's heart. It is she who has brought a cloud of suspicion, a plague of unhappiness into my home. How then is it that when I am alone with her I try to hold her in my arms? It is this as much as anything else that has made me hate my own life that I am quitting it. I feel unclean. Yet for whatever value it may be to the psychologist—let me record it here and now that I passionately desire the woman who has held me in bondage and has treated me [illegible] with studied and continued insolence.

"It was a queer relationship. I furnished drugs to many strange people. But even this was not the full extent of my operations.

"All of this has been going on ever since my friend died—my friend Gaylord Gifford, whom unintentionally, I killed. In these years of what I may call my serfdom to Lola Carewe I believed that I knew the full extent of her wickedness. But recently my eyes were opened. I learned then what I had not before dreamed of—that in the range of this beautiful creature's crimes not even murder was excluded.

"Specifically, what brought me to this realization was a demand that she made upon me. It was an order that could have only one meaning. I was told that she wished me to obtain through some laboratory supply agency, an insect whose bite would be instant death. She confessed to me that someone very important to her meant to commit a murder—I tell you, she brazenly confessed this to me.

Penthouse Blues

WEALTH HAD COME [illegible] New York [illegible] but Rose was not content!

[illegible]

"I just don't seem to fit," she exclaimed to herself rebelliously one evening, as she stood beside the parapet looking out on the firmament of light that was Manhattan.

[illegible]

"I've got an awful nerve to propose to any girl," he told her later, with a rueful expression.

"Why, Jimmie! What do you mean?" she demanded.

"It's the firm," he said. "We're nearly bankrupt. We've been keeping it quiet, but if an order doesn't come in from that company I went to see in New York we'll be sunk. Anyway, I can find some other job, Rose, and—"

[illegible]

"You're mad, but adorably so," said Jimmie. "I don't know what in the world you're up to, but if it's figures you want, I'll give you all the numbers in the book."

[illegible]

"Gosh, I'm glad to see you," he exclaimed. "I've been swearing at myself ever since you left for letting you go off on such a wild goose trip."

CONTRACT IS SIGNED

[illegible]

"Why," he exclaimed in awed tones, "that's five times as much as we hoped to sell! How in the world . . . ?"

[illegible]

"My father happens to control that company," she explained. "I had luncheon with him when I got in, and he was so pleased to find me a business woman that he signed an order for a full year's supply."

Boil, bake or roast a Leadership Shoulder for Easter. You'll enjoy its delicious, mild flavor—its tenderness. You'll be surprised at the many extra slices of rich, clear meat . . . Then you'll agree with 60,000 other New England housewives that a Leadership is the most economical shoulder you can buy . . . Every shoulder is individually selected. All surplus fat and bone is removed. Then each is mildly cured and smoked. You get more slices per pound; also more flavor per slice . . . Tell your dealer now to save you a Leadership Shoulder or Ham for Easter. Remember—"Leadership costs less per serving."
Two pounds of waste removed.

Girl About Town

—By ALYCE SIEMENS—

Imagination:

It is! The face that launched a thousand ships!
It looks at me—and swiftly gives its lips!

"Let woeful Dante walk alone!" I said—
And Beatrice smiled, and followed where I led

Alone and pale is Abelard—the charms

They took us all to the police station, and made us identify ourselves as friends and not enemies.

"That ordeal over, we were thirsty, and adjourned to a bar for a drink. But did we get it? Listen: Most of us were in uniform. The bartender, looking us over said

'The law forbids my selling to men in uniform.'

Gosh, we were dry by this time. A sudden inspiration struck the fellow acting the role of James W. Gerard, the ambassador. He was in civilian attire. Said he to the barman

'How about me? I'm not in uniform.'

The barman wilted for him. He bought a drink, and passed it to the Kaiser actor. He bought another, and another, and thus we all in time had our drink."

Maybe I'm Wrong (About Hollywood)

—By JOHN P. MEDBURY—

Hollywood, March 23—Lew Cody, who has taken up poultry raising as a hobby, is doing a lot of experimenting on his chicken ranch. His latest scheme is to cross bantams with ostriches so that he can produce a new type of hen that will eat like a bantam and lay eggs like an ostrich.

Steinert Hall Lecture

M[illegible] Frane Skirball, Ph.D. will give a talk on "The Background to Mourning Becomes Electra" at Steinert Hall on Saturday morning, April 2, at 11 o'clock.

'Bob' Hall King of Rhymers

"Extemporaneous Bob" Hall, the man who takes any current subject of interest, any timely topic suggested by anyone, anywhere and puts it into rhyme immediately, is the headliner at the Metropolitan. Hall has been doing this stunt for many years. He says the gift is one which nature presented and that he just naturally falls into rhyme on any possible occasion. In the revue, "Stage Door" he asks that the audience suggest any topic. The result is amazing. From all parts of the theater come the response and such subjects as the Lindbergh baby, Mayor Curley, Mahatma Gandhi, President Hoover and others are suggested and at once Hall swings into extemporaneous rhyme in his spicy comments on all of these and more.

Victor McLaglen Offered Leading Role in Film of Chain Gang Story

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1932, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, March 23—Warner Brothers will have to speed up to get their Georgia chain gang story out first. Universal bought "Laughter In Hell" by Jim Tully, dealing also with the life of the prisoner in a chain gang.

Mr. Tully, in his own inimitable way has written a novel that we are told is as thrilling as the galley slave scenes in "Les Miserables." As a tramp, a soldier of fortune, a writer and a few other things Jim is said to be in a position to write such a story. Anyway Universal says it's so good that negotiations have now been opened with Victor McLaglen to get him to play the lead.

Hollywood Happenings

Virginia Pearson signed to play a part in "Back Streets" and that's good news to many people. She is such a fine actress and she has had such a struggle to get back. Mahlon Hamilton, another who has been in the movies since Hector was a pup, is in "Back Streets." George Meeker, who was brought here for "Strictly Dishonorable" and who gave a corking performance, has signed for the same "fillum." It's typical of Hollywood that although Mr. Meeker was excellent in "Strictly Dishonorable" he returned to New York and they had to send for him for his second engagement. Richard Dix has signed a new contract with Radio to make three pictures a year.

Doug's New Picture

Douglas Fairbanks pages us to tell us that he isn't making another travelogue. One picture showing Doug tea-ing with a Maharajah or supping with a foreign prince is enough. His next picture is a drama with love interest and plenty of typical Fairbanks adventure. "For that reason," says Doug, "I am changing the title from 'A Tropical Knight' to 'Robinson Crusoe of the South Seas.'" Doug plays a modern Robinson Crusoe cast ashore in the tropical island near Tahiti where he is making his picture.

Hollywood Chatter

Colonel Frank, father of Weldon Heyburn of the Air Service, has had a chance to meet Greta Nissen. He is here visiting his son, and it was Greta who personally conducted him around the Fox lot. Of course, Weldon was with them and, from the way he smiled, looks as if everything is going to be all right. Stuart Erwin and June Collyer returned yesterday. They stopped in Washington to visit the President. Billie Dove also called on Mr. Hoover. I'll have to go out and buy Harry Rapf's secretary a box of candy or some flowers if she is never going to speak to me again. Harry says after the article I wrote saying they wanted a Greta Garbo to play opposite Clark Gable, the mail started coming in in bushels.

A New Find

The newest find on the Metro-Golden-Mayer lot, Robert Young, isn't being farmed out to other studios. After his appearance as the son in "The Sin Of Madelon Claudet," there were two or three offers for him. Last week after his appearance in "The Wet Parade" the number of companies that had parts for him increased. But Irving Thalberg decided if the boy is that good he'd better stay right on the home lot. His next is the part of the son in "Strange Interlude."

MACHINE-MADE VOICE AND LUPE VELEZ IN PERSON

By GILBERT SELDES

UNTIL LAST WEEK I could take machinery or leave it alone, looking with suspicion on those who declared that we were becoming slaves of the electric lamp, the telephone ring, the motor car, and the radio. I considered mere literature all the prophecies that the legs of man would atrophy because he no longer used them and that man himself, that noble animal, would become a robot. It seemed to me that riding in a barouche exercised the legs as little as riding in a limousine, and that matches were as artificial as electric light bulbs; nor did I observe any marked robotization of humanity. Men and women still appeared human, if not all-too-human.

GILBERT SELDES

Shock!

Last week brought me a nasty jar. I went to the entertaining and remarkably good-humored vaudeville show created by Lou Holtz, a master of attractive foolishness, and in spite of a languid display of harmony girls was prepared to suffer the three Boswell sisters. But I never heard them! They were grouped around a piano, they sang, at least their lips moved, but their voices were not heard. Before them stood a microphone which transmitted their utterances to two loudspeakers placed in the theater; and either the microphone absorbed their voices or in the reduplication of sound in the loudspeakers drowned them out. What I heard in any case, was metallic electrical transcription of music. I wondered whether in an excess of zeal the voices were being transmitted miles away to a broadcasting studio and relayed back to us in the theater. I found the experience displeasing to the point of morbidity.

What For?

The [illegible] they received [illegible] offence against nature as nature in itself. It did not occur to them [illegible] had ceased to enjoy one of the ancient pleasures of humanity, the pleasure taken in the sound of the human voice, nor that [illegible] apparatus was being used to do something no one could really want done.

In [illegible] of the future [illegible] Great Britain [illegible] by telephone and television. I have forgotten whether the lady [illegible] her bath, but I remember that the master of [illegible] a few jokes about the discomforts of [illegible]. The [illegible] is that when we become habituated to the machine, the machine becomes more normal, more natural than the [illegible] of the past.

In a few [illegible] we may [illegible] that people keep away from [illegible] because we can no longer bear the [illegible] of [illegible] voice [illegible] them either to communicate by telephone or to carry a small [illegible] instrument on their persons. The sight of an actual face [illegible] blood may become distasteful to us. We have [illegible] the natural complexion of women [illegible] together and communicate with animated snapshots.

A few [illegible] I had had the [illegible] experience in reverse with Lupe Velez [illegible] of the screen [illegible] Hot Cha. Movie personalities [illegible] from the [illegible] to the special medium [illegible] effective on the [illegible] I remembered [illegible] Miss Velez [illegible] her sizzling and effective presence. The [illegible] come off well enough [illegible] grateful for the exploitation of their charm. But [illegible] grace of bodily movement and the [illegible] snap at the end of the whip which means that all the [illegible] have been combined [illegible] in the movies and suffer [illegible] Miss Velez takes them over to the stage with the [illegible] of a veteran.

She plays a Carmen with [illegible] the dark overtones of the [illegible] on a plane of making fun. But she throws into it sufficient energy to make the impersonation a success, and her physical attractiveness from the roll of the eye to the [illegible] of her fingers are multiplied by her presence a hundred times over the power from the screen.

I do not suppose it would ever occur to Mr. Ziegfeld having Miss Velez on the stage not to let the audience see her but to make them look at her [illegible]. That, in this instance, was what happened to me [illegible]. And perhaps I should say that my happiness in the [illegible] was not enhanced by hearing word which I checked them with other listeners [illegible] You are like the breeze that tried hard to please . . . That was a little too much like radio.

Mickey Mouse Wins

A few weeks ago I got a questionnaire on my preference [illegible] movies. Now I hear that these were sent out, under noble auspices, to professional men and women, and, according to Time, the first ten thousand ballots show that "educated cinemaddicts are fondest of animated cartoons [illegible] of lower mental rating prefer subdivisions of Drama like spiritual struggle, social and sex problems and [illegible]."

First comment [illegible] the first time the intellectual have shown better taste than those of lower mentality rating.

Second comment: are both lying just a little? Are the professors pretending that they prefer Mickey Mouse because it is rather nice of them to smile indulgently on his antics? Are the lower orders trying to appear [illegible] with their preference for serious drama? Are both [illegible]? Casting reticence aside, I checked the animated cartoon and gangster films and left all the other places blank.

Final comment: no matter what they say, movie audiences [illegible] like the animated cartoons better than the super-specials. Proof: go to any neighborhood house and listen—not to the screen but to the audience. The animated cartoons animate the audience; the audience applauds nearly every time at the end of a Silly Symphony or Mickey Mouse or Fleisher cartoon. The audience seldom applauds at the end of the feature.

KIDNAPERS LEFT TRACKS, SAYS TRAPPER BUSH

Hopewell, March 23—The fleeing kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby believed they had succeeded in shrouding their every move in obscurity, so that no one would be able to follow.

But Oscar Bush, mountaineer to whom the Sourland Hills are an open book, easily read in muddy footprints and tell-tale auto ruts, the story of their flight.

He was the first layman called in by Lindbergh when the crime was discovered.

By Oscar Bush

The note the kidnapers left to the Lindberghs when they stole that little sleeping boy out of his crib wasn't the only message the[illegible] left behind them.

Careful as they was [illegible] trace but the [illegible] letter [illegible] keeps writing [illegible] own con[illegible] along, he [illegible] wasn't [illegible] take an [illegible] understand.

All the [illegible] could read their [illegible] on letter [illegible] because they weren't so [illegible] to decipher [illegible] that [illegible] seen on the ground.

FOLLOWED KIDNAPERS

By those signs [illegible] I followed the kidnapers out of the Lindbergh estate [illegible] Featherbed Lane [illegible] the edge of the line [illegible] the West side [illegible] north [illegible] where their car was waiting for them.

And I [illegible] seen that car [illegible] marks it left [illegible] past [illegible] toward Neshanic. The Lindbergh [illegible] send out [illegible] saw fit. There wasn't [illegible] up north Neshanic way.

A muddy lane with [illegible] like [illegible] razors that might [illegible] at the [illegible] neath of your car. Setting up [illegible] into the woods [illegible] like a wet [illegible] mounting up in waves with high [illegible] and long [illegible] at regular intervals.

Something about that particular lane [illegible] my eye and I stopped in front of [illegible] to me.

For there [illegible] to the [illegible] turning into it off the Neshanic road was the marks of a car that must have recently [illegible].

FOLLOWS MUD TRAIL

Plowing [illegible] that deep [illegible] the tire ruts leading straight up [illegible] a couple of [illegible] comes to [illegible] of planks over a little creek [illegible] the bridge is an empty [illegible] and [illegible] of the Neshanic Hi[illegible].

The car tracks [illegible] muddy [illegible] into the [illegible] close to the [illegible]. There they [illegible] and down [illegible] A car has parked there for a while [illegible] maybe [illegible] the searchers to pass on.

But [illegible] aren't very [illegible] the mountain. They aren't [illegible] to climb to the [illegible] if they [illegible] and see a car parked [illegible] won't [illegible] as one [illegible] at breakneck pace over the [illegible] somewhere in the woods.

Well, these kidnapers needn't have worried any. For [illegible] searched the [illegible] the Lindbergh estate and [illegible] but they never went into the mountains at all to hunt.

Now here's a funny thing. A couple of days after the kidnaping [illegible] down [illegible] lunch room away down in [illegible] in conversation with a [illegible].

And he tells me [illegible] morning after the kidnaping he was driving south on the Neshanic road coming in toward the [illegible] heights.

SAW CAR COME OUT

And all of a sudden he sees a car switch out of a lane that from what he describes was that same one into the mountains and turn north facing him.

"The driver," he told me, "was a small fellow with a reddish face, and when he saw me looking at him he had a scared look that was almost wild somehow. There was someone else, a man, in the car—but I didn't notice him because the driver's face sort of cast a spell on me.

"I wasn't driving myself, and by the time I could get the fellow with me to decide to turn around and chase after it, the car was gone toward Neshanic."

Yes, I guess that was the kidnapers fleeing, when they thought it was safe. For a car driving along to Neshanic hours after the child was stolen wasn't anything to attract any attention.

Was the Lindbergh baby in that car and where were the kidnapers taking it? Bush will give you his idea on that tomorrow.

British Boxing Board Won't Let Fans Hand Out Verdict

London, March 23 (INS)—A boxing muddle confronted officials here today as the result of an unusual suggestion made by Jeff Dickson, who will promote the bout here tonight between Primo Carnera, Italian giant and George Cook, Australian heavyweight.

When the managers of the principals were unable to agree on a referee, Dickson announced the winner would be determined by the spectators' applause. The secretary of the British boxing board promptly pointed out that the bout would be illegal if no referee were in the ring. The stewards will decide the matter today.

Odie Cleghorn was badly injured in Detroit last Thursday, when he was thrown to the ice after being sandwiched by Hitchman and Emms. He tore all the muscles against the left side of his chest, which has made it difficult for him to breathe. He worked in Toronto Saturday, was sent back to Detroit for Sunday and came here last night, despite his condition.

Babe Herman Denies Story He Used Head as a Bat

Tampa, Fla., March 23 (AP)—Babe Herman beamed optimism and oratory over his prospects of slugging the lowly Cincinnati Reds out of the National League cellar they occupied last season.

Having signed his contract for $16,500, it was reported, Babe joined the Reds in batting practice today to smash long drives at the training camp here, and then addressed a luncheon club here.

His speech was not recorded, but Babe said afterward that he was going to show "those New York newspaper guys, who never did like the Brooklyn outfit, that he wasn't the goat. And all this dope about me butting a fly back to the diamond with my bean is looney stuff."

KEARNS SIGNS FOR WALKER TO FIGHT SCHAAF

SHARKEY, MAX ON MICKEY'S NEW LIST

By WARREN BROWN

Chicago, March 23 (INS).—Jack Kearns, somewhat nettled at the criticism that has come his way for selecting nondescript opponents for his warriors, Mickey Walker and Jackie Fields, walked into the Chicago Stadium office today and signed a blanket contract for five fights for each of his men.

For Fields—Jimmy McLarnin, Battling Battalino, Billy Petrolle, Young Corbett and Tony Canzoneri.

"We'll fight 'em all in that order," Kearns told Lewis, "or we'll fight any of them in any order.

"Walker wants to fight Dempsey, but I won't let him and we draw the line on fighting guys in wheel chairs. But we're willing to fight Levinsky, the man who beat Dempsey.

INDEPENDENT MERCHANT IS UNSUNG HERO

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, March 23—In this community there are humble heroes who are doing much—perhaps more than all others put together—to prevent the outbreak of critical social trouble.

[illegible]

They are retail merchants. Not chain store managers, not "cash and carry" merchants, but so-called "independents," local citizens who have hearts, sympathetic neighbors who extend credit to many families who would not be regarded as acceptable risks by any banker on the face of the earth.

It is time someone paid a tribute to such unsung heroes, such large-hearted citizens who put neighborliness ahead of cold business considerations, who are motivated more by humane considerations than by cold credit rules.

"Carry" Families That Can't Pay

In the small community where I live there are merchants who are "carrying" families utterly unable to pay. These merchants were born and raised locally. They don't give credit because they figure that it is good business to give credit. They give credit because they know that John Smith and Bill Jones have lost their jobs and cannot pay. They have known John Smith and Bill Jones from school days. They know that John Smith and Bill Jones are at heart honest fellows, who pay when they have the money. But they know that John Smith and Bill Jones have been out of work for months. They know, too, that Mrs. John Smith and Mrs. Bill Jones used to buy quite a lot of things from chain stores when they were in a position to pay cash.

Now that there is no cash, the chain stores refuse to sell them a dollar's worth. How John Smith and Bill Jones are to feed their families is no business of the clerk in charge of the chain store. His orders from headquarters are "no credit."

Robbery Alternative for Many

Suppose every small retailer, every "independent," were to act exactly as the chain store managers act, and refuse to supply a single vegetable or a loaf of bread or a pound of meat, what would John Smith and Bill Jones do?

Do you imagine for a moment they would sit idly at home and watch their wives and their children starve? They would not! They would doubtless do what Daniel Willard, president of the great Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, said he would do rather than see his loved ones starve to death: Find food for them by hook or crook, by violence, if necessary.

Merchants Giving Most Aid

Is it not true, therefore, that you and I owe [illegible] we probably realize to local merchants who are extending credit to needy families?

One of these merchants writes this column:

> "In your column and elsewhere I have seen many branches of business praised for the work they have performed during the present depression. But there is one branch never praised. I refer to the independent retail merchant, to which branch I belong.
>
> "The independent merchant is today feeding more people, without remuneration, than all welfare organizations combined. If they discontinued credit to all those not able to pay, I believe the situation would come to a head immediately.
>
> "Please mention the plight of the independent merchant in your column as I know thousands of merchants would be very glad to know that their methods are at least thought of by someone."

That humane appeal is here responded to sincerely, wholeheartedly, for I know—and you must know—that it is entirely worthy, that it is based on the indisputable truth.

Financial News, Stocks, Bonds and Comment

STATE ST. Hears:

That the market gives little promise of changing from a dull, uninteresting affair. Normally, in the absence of news of a bullish sort, the bears could be counted on to stir things up. However, the threat of congressional investigation is staying their hand and actual developments, or the lack of them, will control share prices.

The Situation

With the market drowsing along in a tiresome way it is only natural that statisticians should turn their efforts toward the uncovering of similar situations in other years. It is a fact that no matter what they uncover in regard to price movements and business they usually find that the stock market did not wait on a visible trade pickup. Stock prices [illegible] the trend.

Right now, following the fairly long period of government bond strength there seem to be excellent opportunities among well secured fixed obligations. Safety of income and principal have been tested under the most trying circumstances.

Colorado Fuel & Iron Company 5's of 1943 are rated a fair industrial investment for the business man. As the third largest producer of rails, the company is in a particularly interesting position, now that the carriers are able to consider more liberal maintenance allowances. The gold 5s are a direct first mortgage on all property and assets as at the date of the obligation. Present price, in the low 60's, represents the failure to earn a profit in 1931.

In accordance with the movement originally launched in this column March 1, we understand a number of the big corporations not already listed on the Boston Stock Exchange are now willing to be listed here. The move, along with establishment of local transfer offices, would enable investors in Boston and the rest of New England to escape the new stock transfer tax levy by which Empire State legislators have sought to raise $28,000,000 additional funds.

• • •

We got in touch, for example, with officials of the Consolidated Gas Co., largely owned in New England. We understand they are now favorably disposed toward listing on the Boston Stock Exchange.

• • •

Among those appearing in Washington against the Federal Home Loan Bank bill widely opposed by Boston leaders was Vice-President W. H. Kingsley of the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. W. C. Ermon, president of the Equitable Homestead Assn of New Orleans, who also appeared explained the [illegible] of his organization. He stated that in stated that only in Louisiana are building and loan bodies called homestead associations.

Overseas the stock exchanges remain closed over the Easter week-end. The New York Stock Exchange has always closed on Good Friday but has never extended the closing over the week-end. This is despite the fact that the volume of trading in the two-hour session is usually very small.

With the hours of labor for many reduced to zero, "leave to withdraw" was granted on Beacon Hill to House Bill 399, which would have reduced the weekly hours of labor from 48 to 36.

• • •

Efforts are being made on Beacon Hill to make changes in the "Blue Sky law." We find sentiment in State St. generally opposed to any changes, with the feeling prevailing that the law should be left [illegible] Most [illegible] think [illegible] being [illegible] administered by the Public Utilities Commission.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

THE STOCK market steadied today after an early sag had carried prices back to recent lows. Activity was limited. Strength in the bond division bolstered sentiment.

"Mop" Maturities of April 1 Not Feared

Missouri Pacific bonds remain strong, and the street has become convinced that its impression the April 1 maturity would be taken care of "somehow" was correct. The opinion seems to be gaining ground in financial circles that the Reconstruction Finance Corp. will yield to bankers' demands.

In this connection it was interesting to note the disclosure that the White House estimate of $300,000,000 to $100,000,00 as railway financial requirements this year did not allow for their short-term loans.

Big Bears Seeking Long Stock Opinions

According to stories, several prominent bear operators have secured options on large blocks of various stocks owned by investment trusts and other institutions. The object of this is obviously to assure them adequate supplies of stock for deliveries against sales after April 1, when the order prohibiting brokers from using customers holdings for borrowing purposes without written authorization takes effect. The gossip is that big speculators optioning the stocks have agreed to guaranty the owners payment of any premiums quoted for the particular issue in the official loan market.

Unsettled Wheat Market Affects Case

Economic Indexes Remain Unsettled

Tone of economic and statistical reviews carried to the end of last week have served to dishearten observers who anticipated some evidence of improvement before the end of the winter season. Most of the popular barometers continue to emphasize the exceedingly poor state of trade and industry and contain little calculated to produce even slight betterment in any one particular direction. Fact that the banking and credit situations have strengthened notwithstanding, consensus of belief is that trade indications will be of much more importance from now on in determining the trend of stock prices than was the case during the past month.

Oil Conditions Reported Better

Well informed authorities on the oil situation indicated the element of time is working in favor of an improved situation in the industry. Considerable stress is laid on the fact that crude output has varied little of late whereas a year ago production was increasing rapidly. Continued decline in refinery runs contrasts with higher and rising totals at this time in 1931. These sources are of the opinion that with the advent of Spring, better prices should prevail generally both in crude and refined markets inasmuch as the balance between production and consumption is now favorable for a higher price level.

Standard Oil Merger Negotiations

About a week ago rumors were widely circulated in Wall Street that merger negotiations between Standard Oil of New Jersey and Standard Oil of California had been resumed actively. Previously to that time there were reports that the plan had been abandoned. President Kingsbury of the California company was in this city last week and upon his return to San Francisco a rumor came from that city that the merger talks have been terminated. As a matter of fact the merger plan has been merely dormant up to this time and the conversations have not been ended. Many believe the combination will go through eventually.

Morgan to Speak in Aid Campaign

J. Pierpont Morgan will break his rule and go on air tonight in a 15-minute speech broadcast over nation-wide National Broadcasting Co. hookup at 8 p. m. He will talk on need for and value of "block aid" campaign now under way in New York. By asking residents of each block to care for one family by contributing from ten cents to $1 a week, campaigners hope to provide wages for 20,000 unemployed family heads.

STOCKS LOWER ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

Stocks were worked to lower levels in today's dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange, with changes limited to a narrow range. Trading was extremely dull. Rails were mixed, with Atchison showing a fractional gain while New Haven and Pennsylvania each showed slight recessions.

Kreuger & Toll and Stone & Webster were at fractionally higher levels. Minor losses were shown for such issues as Hathaway B, United Fruit and Gillette. Westfield Manufacturing was at a new low for the year on a fractional recession. United Shoe added a minor reaction.

As stated here March 2[illegible], contracts have been signed for merger of businesses of Cavanagh-Dobbs Inc. and Knox Hat Co. Inc. Actual merger will be effected through incorporation of a new company, name of which will probably be the General Hat Corp.

The hat [illegible] to be controlled by the proposed company will include Dobbs, Knox, Dunlap, Cavanagh, Knapp Felt, Hodshon Berg, Byrom and others.

The contracts are subject to ratification by stockholders of the two companies and special meetings for this purpose will be called in the near future.

Production will be continued at Norwalk, Ct., plant, but factory in Brooklyn, N. Y., will be closed.

Dividends

• • •

U. S. Trust Company declared regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents, payable April 1, 193[illegible], to stockholders of record March 22.

Merrill Griswold, a member of the firm of Gaston, Snow, Saltonstall & Hunt, and a trustee of Massachusetts Investors Trust, was elected a director.

Rail Borrowing Plans Authorized

Washington, March 23 (AP)—The Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad today was authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission to borrow $[illegible] from the Reconstruction Corporation.

At the same time the commission authorized the Kentucky and Indiana Terminal Railroad Co. to borrow $800,000.

SPECTATOR Says:

One interesting fact is that support has appeared in Wall st. around the lows of the current reaction for the last few days. Continuation of this would permit a further advance if the news became more favorable.

Rail Action

The rails as a group have been acting better for several days and apparently hold the key to any rally. Perhaps the [illegible] ings today will do the trick. The trading community, however, [illegible] prefers to wait for a settlement of the Washington tax battle before doing much in the market.

Further stories of increased Ford activities are coming into the financial district, with reports that he will announce some big contracts this week.

Here and There

Stocks have about [illegible] to [illegible] upside. First quarter earnings reports will start coming in early next month and will generally give the market a sour mouth [illegible]. Then too there will be [illegible] meetings like that of U. S. Steel in April and uncertainty [illegible] these will cause some hesitation at least. [illegible] Wall Street would [illegible] willing to call first quarter [illegible] water over the dam [illegible] some pep [illegible] what it wants [illegible] for buying stocks.

American Telephone's earnings for the first quarter are being [illegible] estimated at [illegible] $1.8[illegible] to $2.00 a share.

Use of Egyptian Cotton Increases

World consumption of Egyptian cotton has increased materially during the past year, according to the New York Cotton Exchange Service. During the first half of the present season the world used 510,000 running bales, compared with 465,000 in the second half of last season, and 400,0[illegible] in the first half of the season. Consumption in the first half of this season was consequently more than 25 per cent larger than that in the corresponding period a year ago.

Humble Oil Sells Powell Properties

Houston, Tex., March 23—Humble Oil & Refining Company, subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, has sold its producing properties in Powell oil field near Corsicana to Ocean Bay [illegible] of that city. Daily average production of the properties averages [illegible] barrels, all from pumping wells. Powell field where Gulf, Texas and Magnolia companies also have interest, was developed largely by Humble in 1923.

PRICE CHANGES IN WALL STREET ARE MODERATE

New York, March 23—Price changes were mostly moderate in trading today on the New York Stock Exchange. Leaders firmed after an early sag. Oils had strong spots under leadership of Royal Dutch, which advanced more than a point.

Better news from industry came to the stock market's support and brought rallying tendencies after early irregularity.

LOADINGS AT PEAK.

Car loadings, swelled by a sharp pickup in cial, reached the year's high in the week ended March 12, and the steel trade reviews predicted an upturn in operations in the next two weeks, basing the forecast on a rise in automobile production.

Pressure on American Telephone was again the unsettling influence in the first hour, but the stock showed resistance around yesterday's low. This brought renewal of buying throughout the list and leading stocks came back to around last night's close.

U. S. Steel was especially active, reflecting the optimism of the trade reviews. General Electric held within a narrow range, its official earnings report of $1.33 a share for 1931 being the same as that announced when the dividend was reduced several weeks ago.

Copper stocks failed to maintain the gains of yesterday's closing spurt and slipped back to their lows. Price changes in the oils were insignificant despite the rise in production for the week.

Strength in bonds, led by government obligations, helped sentiment. Commodities were featured by a spurt in sugar futures and better action of wheat.

LIGHT GIVEN ON KREUGER

Kreuger & Toll sold mostly unchanged. The New York Stock Exchange announcement of shifts made in the collateral covering Kreuger & Toll debenture bonds in this market served to throw light on the entire Kreuger & Toll situation which, partly because of its mystery, has been an unsettling stock market factor.

While bankers saw a plausible explanation in the collateral changes to justify past selling of Kreuger & Toll securities, they nevertheless welcomed the new information. For one thing, they said, it would bring the whole situation into the open where it can be fairly weighed by investors wtihout the inevitable misgivings which accompany the unknown.

The General Electric report again provided another illustration of the sharp 1931 decline in earnings of a "blue chip" favorite. The statement, however, was in line with expectations.

BIG N. Y. CENTRAL ORDER

The weekly steel trade report showed no further contraction in production, standing last week at 25 per cent of capacity, and a degree of encouragement was afforded in the Iron Age forecast that the "turn will come within the next weeks." Announcement that the New York Central had placed an order for 30,000 tons of rail with four steel companies was favorably received.

Sterling continued its steady price tone of previous days, cables opening at $3.64½, unchanged.

Calumet & Hecla was inactive. Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Co. has issued its pamphlet report for 1931, showing an operating loss of $623,034, contrasting with an operating profit in 1930 of $2,058,755 or $1.02 per share on the 2,005,502 shares outstanding.

STEEL BUYING BY RAILS SEEN

New York, March 23 (AP)—Iron Age said today the steel industry looks forward to a seasonal rise in activities which it expects will come within the next two weeks.

Business failed to improve in March, normally the month of peak operations, with ingot production at 25 per cent of capacity. The review says expectations of betterment are predicated upon the fact that the Ford Motor Company soon must release large orders if it is to attain a volume production schedule early in April. Other automobile manufacturers also are expected to release business that has been held back because of restricted output.

Financial aid to railroads through the medium of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation is expected to stimulate equipment buying, the review says.

Efforts to strengthen steel prices are complicated at seaboard points because of growing foreign competition, it is stated.

Curb Tone Is Steady, Trading Very Dull

New York, March 23 (AP)—Trading came almost to a standstill on the curb market today. Evaporation of offerings brought a somewhat steadier tone, but professionals were satisfied to let the list drift.

Electric Bond & Share common equities still were rather easy, following approval of the recaptialization plan which reduces the number of share sto about 4,917,000 and permits the transfer of approximately $123,000,000 to surplus from capital.

"Gas" Price Raised

Atlantic Refining Co. has advanced tank-car price of United States motor gasoline to 6¼ cents a gallon at Providence, Portland, Boston, Bayonne, Philadelphia, Norfolk, Brunswick, and Jacksonville.

Hardware Buying Is Found Expanded

New York, March 23—The most encouraging development in the hardware trade is the expanded buying by wholesalers, Hardware Age will say tomorrow in its weekly market summary. Manufacturers have been wont to complain that the recent improvement in retail selling has failed to reach them, or has reached them slowly, and in the smallest doses of re-fill ordering. At this time, however, wholesale buying is reported the best thus far in 1932.

Evidently jobbers' stocks, moderate for many months, have felt the drain of gradually improved retail buying. It also appears that there is some hedging against actual or expected price increases, and against the higher costs which may be imposed by the contemplated manufacturers' sales tax.

There are rather numerous factors pointing to a probable real upturn in business volume later in the year. Confidence is more surely being restored, as evidenced by the virtual disappearance of bank failures and the improved statistics concerning savings deposits, sales of securities, and the decline of currency in circulation. A backward look over the winter just past shows that most of the evils feared did not materialize.

Many manufacturers and merchants, even many banks, find that they have turned away badly needed business, for no better reason than a probable surplus of fear.

Success Seen for Niagara in Recapitalization Plan

New York, March 23 (AP)—Following the overwhelming vote of stockholders of Electric Bond & Share Company in favor of the proposal to cut down the common stock of the company by two-thirds, it was forecast in utility and banking circles here today that the Niagara Hudson Power Company recapitalization plan would meet with success.

The Niagara Hudson plan also calls for a reduction of the common on the basis of one new share for every three shares now outstanding. Notices were mailed to stockholders over the week-end asking for their proxies in favor of the plan which will come up for vote at the company's annual meeting on April 12, and not today, as previously reported.

La Salle Copper Report Given

Monsanto Chemical Amends Law

St. Louis, March 23—At annual meeting of Monsanto Chemical Works the by-laws were amended to authorize the holding of directors meetings outside the State of Missouri, as well as within the State.

Isle Royale Report Is Issued

Isle Royale Copper Company reports for 1931 an operating loss before depreciation and depletion of $255,572 against loss in 1930 of $148,336. Net loss after depreciation and depletion was $378,993 against $343,667 in previous year. In 1929, profits after all charges were equivalent to $1.31 per share on the 150,000 shares outstanding and 43 cents per share in 1928.

Copper production in 1931 amounted to 7,731,418 pounds, made at a cost of 11.48 cents per pound, exclusive of depreciation and depletion. The company received an average price for its copper sold during the year of 8.66 cents per pound.

Winnipeg Electric Reverses Action

Montreal, March 23—Winnipeg Electric Company has reversed its previous action and has determined to pay interest instalment of January 2 this year on 6 per cent first refunding mortgage bonds in New York funds. Funds have been made available in New York for disbursement and to holders, who have cashed coupons in Canadian funds, a 12½ per cent premium will be paid.

Electric Power Output Down

New York, March 23 (AP)—Electric Power output for the week ended March 19 was 1,537,747,000 kilowatt-hours, a slight drop from the preceding week, and a decrease of 8.6 per cent from the corresponding week last year. For the past three weeks reported production has shown a fairly constant decrease of slightly more than 8 per cent from last year.

Lead Price Again Reduced

New York, March 23 (AP)—Another reduction in the price of refined lead was announced today, American Smelting & Refining Company naming 8 cents a pound, a reduction of 15 points. With this revision, lead is off ½ cent a pound from its recent level.

Natural Gas Bonds Added to Savings "Legals"

New York, March 23—Governor Roosevelt has signed bill amending New York banking law to permit savings banks to invest in bonds of corporations supplying natural gas purchased from another corporation. The law formerly stipulated that only bonds of companies supplying artificial gas were eligible.

Of the more than $2,000,000,000 of public utility bonds which have become legal since March, 1928, when the public utility amendment to the New York law was enacted, some $400,000,000,000 will be safeguarded by this amendment.

The amendment was sponsored by F. V. Henshaw, of Wood, Struthers & Co. Provision that natural gas must be purchased from another corporation insures that the bonds are not secured partly, or wholly, by pledge of natural gas properties.

Important bonds in danger of removal prior to passage of the amendment were those of Peoples Gas Light & Coke Co., Public Service Electric & Gas Co., and Consolidated Gas, Electric Light, Heat & Power of Baltimore. Bonds that might become eligible for legality include those of Pacific Gas & Electric, Los Angeles Gas & Electric Co., Dayton Power & Light Co., and Cincinnati Gas & Electric Co.

The list of legals could be still further increased by $448,000,000 by another amendment which has been submitted by Mr. Henshaw to the New York State Savings Banks Association, which would admit, under careful restrictions, certain collateral trust and debentures of the Bell Telephone System.

GEN. ELECTRIC HIRES 65,516

Schenectady, March 23—The 40th annual report of General Electric Company for the year 1931, issued today shows profit available for dividends amounting to $40,956,996, equivalent, after dividends on the special stock, to $1.33 a share on the 28,845,927 shares of no-par value common stock, compared with $57,-490,915 in 1930, or $1.90 a share on the same number of shares.

Dividends of 60 cents per share on special stock and $1.60 per share on common stock amounted to $48,-725,262 for 1931, resulting in a deficit of $7,768,266, which was taken from surplus, leaving a balance in surplus on December 31, 1931, of $172,-198,374.

During the company's history of 40 years, cash dividends have been paid in all but the four years ended January 31, 1898, and in only one previous year, that ending January 31, 1909, did the company fail to earn its full cash dividend.

Average number of employes during 1931 was 65,516, compared with 78,380 during 1930.

Stocks Steady on London Exchange

London, March 23 (AP)—Uncertainty during the coming holidays regarding conditions on the continent caused dullness and narrow movements in stock exchange prices today. Gilt edged and international issues were steady with others easy. Suport from Paris late rhelped somewhat and the closing was steadier.

Motor Cars Bring Speed to Carriers

Washington, March 23—Despite the tendency of the average speed on German railways to increase, it appears that the German Railway Company looks to the development of motor driven rail cars for further advances in increasing the speed of its express trains, according to a report from Consul Lester L. Schnare, Hamburg, made public by the Department of Commerce.

It is indicated in local circles that the company also expects to reduce operating costs by the use of motor-driven cars on feeder lines, as well as, to a lesser extent, on main lines.

Sheetless Sleeping to Reduce Cost

Washington, March 23—If travelers prefer to do without sheets on their berths in third class carriages, German sleeping car rates will be much cheaper during vacation time this year, says the Mitropa Co. This company operates the dining and sleeping cars on German railways. Rates have been reduced from 10 marks to 6½ marks, according to a report to the Department of Commerce from Assistant Trade Commissioner A. Douglas Cook, Berlin. The former price included linen.

Central American Rail's Income Lower

International Railways of Central America reports for February gross revenues of $522,141, as compared with $606,102 in February, 1931. Income applicable to fixed charges totaled $229,580, as compared with $276,142.

For the two months ended Feb. 29, 1932, gross revenues totaled $1,042,253, as compared with $1,272,872 for the same period in 1931. Income applicable to fixed charges for the two months totaled $451,233, as compared with $594,502.

New York Central Loadings Are Lower

New York, March 23—New York Central lines for week ended March 19 handled 41,126 revenue cars, against 53,798 in the like week in 1931. Loadings for the week of March 12 were 40,323, against 53,-845 in similar period last year.

For the week ended March 19 loadings showed a decline of only 23.6 per cent from the 1931 figure, against a decline of 25.1 per cent in the preceding week as compared with a year ago.

Night become deep and deeply.
Wo! Wo Woo! one by voice
Night become more deeply.
Oh! your sorrowful owl,

FRISBY EXPLAINS CAMERA POSE

MANCHURIA MANOR — My dear, dear Mrs. Frisby, how could you write a letter like that? Have you no faith in your own Congressman at Large Horace Walpole Frisby-wisby? The flashlight picture sent to you—by enemies of my campaign for better relationships between American and Manchurian homes, I might say in passing—was taken by unknown parties. I would like to get my hands on these parties. I wish to congratulate them. They couldn't have caught a better likeness of the tableau posed by me and the young lady known as Miss Chapel. The tableau is called "Peace," and is going to be put on at the Japanese-Sino Whist and Sandwich Club next Friday night. Now don't let me hear another peep out of you on this subject, Mrs. Frisby—complete trust is the only thing that can establish complete trust between us two. And no more cracks about me being this paper's "Manchurian co-respondent" either.

THE VOICE OF BROADWAY

By LOUIS SOBOL

Snapshots at Random!

Little odd spots of Manhattan . . . MacDougal Alley, for instance . . . a narrow thoroughfare flanked by barns converted into studios . . . Mulberry Bend . . . Drab, unimpressive but it wasn't so many decades ago when it was the city's Murder Spot . . . The toughest of the town's toughs congregated here and thumped each other's heads and sliced each other's throats although the chief pastime was to waylay innocent pedestrians . . . Here were staged the famous battles between the Five Pointers and the Bowery toughs or gangsters . . . Allen st. . . . Now showing its face to the sun after years spent in the shadows of the glowering elevated structure . . . Battery Park at midnight . . . The city's most romantic spot . . . Liberty in the harbor buoyantly aglow . . . Passing ships with their twinkling lights . . . The beating tom-tom of the excited waters . . . And trysting couples, bundled up against the cold, walking slowly along the paths by the seawall . . . Frantic Essex st., heart of the Ghetto, with its sour-pickled odors, its torch-lighted pushcarts and its cellar stores . . . Placid Yorkville and its German beer gardens . . . Chinatown with its thin crooked ribbons of streets and its mysterious hallways and citizenry . . . Bizarre looking shops with their displays of bizarre edibles . . . bamboo shoots, lichee nuts, cumquats, dried fish, crazy looking plucked birds . . . A thousand and one odd spots freckle Manhattan's narrow torso and your lazy friend, Mister Sobol, may some day rouse himself from his columnistic lethargy, thumb his expansive schnozzle at the over-publicized Broadway terrain and devote himself to these more obscure precincts which furnish the blood and sinew of The City.

We drop in for the midnight show at the Palace Saturday and inspect with awed admiration the 1932 chassis of the once fleshly Paul Whiteman . . . A Modern Metamorphosis shooting a constructive thrill through the veins of the fat gals in the audience . . . You can almost hear their thoughts shout . . . "If he can do it, why can't I?" . . . The slim, Valentinoish Russ Columbo rolls romantic eyes as he croons through the stage mike . . . The Saturday night assembly of Broadway's folks is tapped by Jay C. Flippen for bows in the spotlight so that the cash customers from The Bronx, Brooklyn and Washington Heights may see, almost touch and shiver with the thrill of contiguity with the great and the near great . . . At least, those taking the bow have that impression . . . Texas Guinan rises cheerfully, almost menacingly . . . Pat Rooney beams as the circle of light pales his already pale features and smiles as his wife, Marion Bent, joins him in the bow . . . One of the Duncan gals plops up out of her seat in a box and chirps a regret that her sister isn't with her, the sister, it appears, being happily married . . . Harry Langdon, screen comic, raises both hands to the lofty ceiling, and Charles Chase, another screen comic, cheerfully remains standing until the multitude signifies by its diminishing applause that it has had a sufficiency of the Chase features and is now hungry for some one else, who, it turns out, is Charles King, to be succeeded by one of the slapstick Britton brothers . . . We remain long enough to enjoy the clowning genius of Al Trahan, and to regret that he doesn't exercise his magnificent voice a bit more, and then dash out and speed down to the Village, where, amidst the cheerful and musical clinking of cocktail glasses, the swish of a bartender's towel and the soft chant of badly rhymed torch ballads, we sit back with genial companions and wax delightfully melancholy on the futility of a columnist's night life.

Monday night at the Folies Bergere . . . The eight tall, statuesque Caucasian beauties in their clinging, revealing flimsies, parade slowly around the floor with mincing steps as the boisterous sepian entertainers dance madly, scatsing and raise the roof generally . . . One of the duskier beauties arouses my interest . . . she has delicate, almost patrician features, thin lips and a Caucasian type of countenance, softened by long, black curls . . . But her gestures and movements are typically negroid . . . Bill Rowland, the movie producer, sits with eyes popping . . . Across the floor, Barney Gallant, the Village night club owner; Bobby Dolan, the pianist, and Fay Stewart, the Ziegfeld beauty, in a friendly huddle . . . At a floorside table, a young girl, her eyes sparkling, whispers to an older woman as Jean Malin warbles "Minnie the Moocher" . . . Doris Duke, one of America's wealthiest heiresses . . . Later with Gallant, Dolan and the Stewart gal, we trot over to El Garron . . . The slim Pancho with his tortoise-shell glasses giving him a Harold Lloyd effect, joins us . . . "I am expect maybe my wife weel come over here" . . . "Who is your wife?" asks Kay . . . "Mary Coyle," replies the orchestra leader. "She with "Hotcha" . . . "Heavens," screams the Stewart lass, "Mary's my best girl friend." . . . Peppy DeAlbrew clicks his heels, bows low and kisses the hand of a dark-haired gal sitting with Bill Harty, the Wailin' Wall gent, and a few seconds later whirls her about in a tango . . . Big Bill Plankinton stops at our table for a second . . . Youthful millionaire, his chief worry at the moment is whether to delay his trip to Havana Tuesday.

Funny—this business of chronicling Broadway's events . . . You find yourself, almost unconscously, jaunting over the same beaten path, week in and week out . . . To Reuben's, to Dave's, to Lindy's, to Dinty Moore's—to the Mayfair or the Pierrette on Saturday nights . . . to the various premieres of stage and cinema . . . to th[illegible]w night clubs and the many speaks . . . And after a while, when you check up on yourself, you discover that you've been meeting the same people—occasionally the man you met on Tuesday night with that gal from the Scandals will be out on Wednesday night with the gal from the Vanities who was with some other fellow Tuesday night. People go out of town for a spell. People come back to town after being away. But they're the same people you've been mentioning all the time . . . Harry Richman's back, for instance, and now you'll have to put up with his name in the column.

An unusual experience Wednesday night . . . Our debut as a co-star in the first of a series of movie shorts . . . A wise-cracking gent, named Eddie, slaps a reddish paste over our anemic pan, pencils our eyes, rouges our lips and then slaps and kneads our features until we emerge ready to join the lipthing sisterhood . . . A flock of Guinan gals flutter about in scanty array, chattering like magpies . . . Redheaded Anne Boland, blond Ray Reichner, hoydenish Babe Fenton, bland Thais Giroux, dimpling Texas Rayne . . . Guinan herself, co-starring with us, emerges in a dazzling costume and yells for "Coffee and a sandwich. I'm passing out" . . . We dash over, for a few seconds, to join Barbara Blair's birthday party at the Follies club and snicker a bit as the secretary of a titled gentleman whose name persists in escaping us announces the count's betrothal to the Blair gal.

. . . And then back to the studio to swelter under the Kliegs until 7:30 in the morning . . . snapshots . . . The Album of Manhattan.

INDIA MOSLEMS WARN BRITAIN

Lahore, India, March 23 (AP)—The all-India Moslem conference, representing 70,000,000 followers of Islam in India, adopted a resolution declaring that unless the British government accepts Moslem demands for the new constitution by June, it will take "direct action."

The conference, amid shouts of anti-British slogans, demanded greater representation of Moslems on provincial bodies, in the army and in other government services.

Electric Heater "Pushes' Plant Life

Experiments have shown lettuce breaks ground in three days; tomatoes over the heater are bigger and more uniform; geraniums take root in 18 days instead of 30; from 95 to 98 out of 100 double petunia cuttings take root where five out of 100 formerly did.

Closed Gloucester Bank Is Reopened

Gloucester, March 23 (AP)—The Gloucester National Bank, oldest bank in Massachusetts and fifth oldest in the country, which closed its doors December 15, reopened for business today

The 90-day law under which depositors must give three months' notice of withdrawal, was invoked in the savings department

Monoxide Gas Kills Broker in Garage

Buffalo, N. Y., March 23 (AP)—Edwin F. A. Kurtz, prominent investment broker, was found dead in a garage in the rear of his home in a fashionable section. The body was discovered by a maid and a medical examiner said death was caused by carbon monoxide.

Japanese Official Beaten in Hamburg

Hamburg, Germany, March 23 (AP)—M. Shiyematsu, assistant Japanese consul here, was attacked in the street last night and badly beaten by five men, three were arrested.

Aisle Galloper at Convention

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Here's the way the political situation frames up. The Democrats are still paying for their last campaign while the Republicos are way ahead on the next one.

Hoover must stick to his anti-salooners for they made him what he is today and he hopes they're satisfied.

We'll know more during the conventions. We've just got our stampeding badge entitling us to rush up and down the aisles carrying a banner upside down.

Income Collections Exceed Estimates

The treasury statement for last Monday showed receipts for 21 days of March amounted to $178,567,113. The treasury had forecast collections for the entire month would approximate $175,000,000. Receipts for Monday were $11,129,428, $2,000,000 less than on the comparative day a year ago.

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTION
"NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS"

Sealed proposals for the erection and completion of a Hospital Building at the State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Massachusetts, including all trades, will be received by the Commissioner of Correction at the office of the Superintendent State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass., until 2 o'clock p. m. April 12, 1932 at which time the bids will be publicly opened and read. Contractors desiring plans and specifications may obtain same at the office of McLaughlin & Burr, Architects, 88 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass., and must deposit a check in the amount of $600.00, this amount to be included in the proposals and all deposits except that of the successful bidder will be returned upon the return of plans and specifications. The three lowest bidders will be required to submit a list of competent sub-contractors to the Architects before 2 p. m. of the day following the opening of bids. Proposals must be made upon the prescribed form of the Department and must be accompanied by a certified check for $2500.00, made payable to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. A security bond for the full amount of the contract price will be required. The Department reserves the right to reject any or all proposals or to accept one not the lowest, if it is deemed to be for the best interest of the Commonwealth to so do.

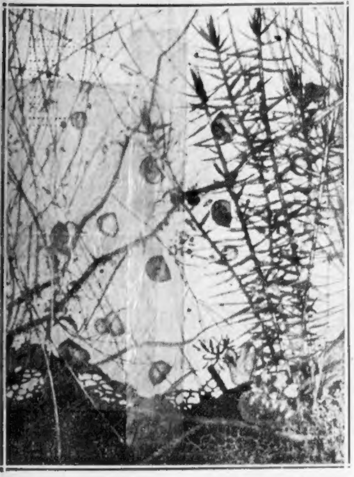
'Eye Hath Not Seen'

This Is a World of Infinite Wonder



WHAT DO YOU SUPPOSE THIS PICTURE SHOWS?

An ant looks small to us, because we are so much bigger than an ant. The whale looked big to Jonah, because Jonah was so much smaller than the whale. Nothing is BIG, nothing is SMALL.

The ant has living on it creatures too small for us to see that attack and destroy it. Those creatures have on them still smaller creatures that the microscope could not reveal. They, in turn, have their diseases and quarrels. Each of them is made up of many atoms, and each atom is made up of electrons with a central proton, the whole as complicated as the sun and the planets.

As far up as we can go bigness increases, as far down as we can go littleness becomes smaller. There is no big, no little, no up, no down. Twelve hours from now, the earth having turned half way around, your feet will be pointing where your head is pointing now, but far away, in another part of space.

This picture is printed to remind us that there is no BIG, no LITTLE. If, in its lower left-hand corner, an artist had painted a little man in a diving suit you might have said: "It shows the depths of the ocean."

If he had put in a raging lion or gorilla, you would have said: "It's an African jungle."

As a matter of fact it is just HALF A CUBIC INCH of water from a stagnant pond, magnified in diameter one hundred times, and cubically one million times.

But in this half-inch of stagnant pond water the struggle for life goes on, one microscopic plant crowding out another, one primitive form of life devouring its fellows with intense satisfaction.

Small as it is, this tiny "infra-cosmos" is bigger and more important, compared with our earth, than our earth would be compared with the universe around it.

This earth, our sun, a million times as big as the earth, this whole cosmic drop we call the solar system, is a million times less than a cubic inch, compared with infinite space, through which light, going 186,000 miles a second, runs errands that last millions of years.

Looking at the little things in this stagnant water we should find some comfort in the knowledge that whatever happens matters little, since we are so unimportant. It would not make so very much difference if a cow should drink this half cubic inch of pond water.

What Price Art?

"Cabbages and beets, for Scott and Keats!" That was the formula whereby a library in a mid-Western village filled the gaps in its shelves. The librarian took in these comestibles and traded them off at a bookshop for books.

The trading idea is not a bad one. A group of artists in a New York gallery are exchanging their masterpieces for canned goods and rent, and are doing fairly well. There are difficulties, of course, in working out the ratio between tinned tomatoes and landscape, and whether a hall bedroom is worth one sunset or two.

But money is still being exchanged for paintings. Sixteen pictures by George DeForest Brush have been bought at the Grand Central Galleries lately, and for large sums. Mr. Brush, however, has long been dead. We may surmise from this that an artist is under an acute disadvantage when he is alive.

Bouquets for the Race

Twelve acres of land at the Chicago exposition next year will be taken up with a panorama of the human race. It will start with gorilla-face cavemen, who went on all fours, and wind up with the handsome types we are today. To arrive at our present looks it took 50,000 years of evolution.

The idea isn't new, of course. There is a long "panorama of life" at the Smithsonian Museum, but the human race occupies only one foot of it—inserted as an afterthought, perhaps. The scientists seemed to think man is a comparative newcomer, and so he is compared to the mosquito, which has looked the same for the last four million years.

The Chicago idea is better. It is a drive on that inferiority complex feeling.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

You Can't Be Sure

WHEN I WAS very young, I wanted to be SURE about everything I did.

I wanted to be SURE that I would like a new job, before I took it.

I wanted to be SURE that I would be happy in a new place, before I moved there.

I wanted to be SURE that a new friend was exactly what I wanted a friend to be, before I entered into a friendship.

Above all, I wanted to be sure that the thing I was about to do, whatever it might be, was RIGHT. I didn't want it to be PARTLY right, I wanted it to be absolutely right, without the slightest tinge of wrong.

For I believed that there was such a thing as 100 per cent goodness—100 per cent happiness. I believed that there were perfect people, perfect jobs, perfect places, perfect deeds; and that if one were wise enough and looked long enough, one could find all this perfection.

All around me I saw multitudes of people who had not found it—people who had chosen the wrong mate, or the wrong work, or had made the wrong decision. But that was obviously their own fault. If only they had been a little more sensible, more patient and self-controlled, then they could have arranged life to their perfect satisfaction. They could have been SURE of happiness.

That is how I believed once—and what a lot of misery it led me into! How surprised and shocked I was when my neat little scheme of things didn't work. How sore at my fellow men— and downright peeved at God! And what angry tears of self-pity I wept over myself as, one after another, my bubbles burst! And of course I blamed everyone but myself, and deduced that I was far too good for the coarse and vicious human race, and so abandoned myself to bitterness.

But bitterness is a lonely role, and gradually I began to ask myself a few constructive questions. Was it possible that everybody was "out of step except myself?"

I began to see that my own attitude was to blame. It wasn't such a fine and noble attitude as I had thought. It was really a stupid and silly, even a selfish attitude. I had wanted to be SURE of everything, and I had gotten mad and refused to play if the reality fell short of perfection.

BUT THE TRUTH WAS, NO ONE COULD BE SURE OF ANYTHING; AND ONLY A VERY CONCEITED AND IGNORANT PERSON WOULD DEMAND SUCH SURETY.

No person was perfect. No job was perfect. No place was perfect. No program of life was perfect. In everyone and in everything there were qualities and attributes which did not fit my notion of things.

Above all, I found that there was no such a thing as a perfect act. The act that was right for me might be absolutely wrong for the other fellow. And even in my best A No. 1 acts there was plenty of concealed cussedness.

And so I no longer ask for surety. I know now that it is impossible, and I realize also that there is something greater in life than "always being sure." It's a far greater thing to live life as a gamble, than a a certainty; to never know what will turn up next; to take a chance with your heart and your fortune; feeling that, if you lose this time, there's another chance ahead.

That, to me, is the real human adventure. The other way is the plan of a cushioned cat.

New York Day by Day

Things Remembered

NEW YORK, March 23—The New York one never forgets: That pink haze over Broadway when lights come on . . . Wall Street's phantom stillness after dusk . . . The sad, dry smell from subway gratings . . . The soft tranquility about The Little Church Around the Corner . . . Otto Kahn's white mufflers.

The 6 p. m. home-going rush across 42nd street . . . The brittle talkers in front of the Palace . . . Mayor Walker's hat dip . . . The avenue's Sunday morning worshippers . . . The electric news bulletins in Times square . . . Texas Guinan . . . A premiere of the Follies.

Saturday night in Chinatown . . . Intellects at Town Hall lectures . . . Paddy's market . . . Drop-the-handkerchief ladies of the hotel foyers . . . Morris Gest's fuzzy hat . . . St. Paul's brown spire . . . Noonday lunchers on Trinity graves . . The geometrical dazzle of the Empire building.

Tex Rickard's toga seems to have fallen on the slim shoulders of Jimmy Johnston, known to Fistiana as "The Boy Bandit." He came from Ireland and began as a "preliminary boy," winding up managing fighters and making matches. He is 56, the father of 11 children, the eldest 33 and the youngest four. He has the taciturnity of Tex and chews a dry cigar with the same bovine content.

It was Jimmy who once philosophized thus: "I can fool all the people some of the time and some of the people all the time and what time there is left I have a little fun fooling myself."

At the same exchange of repartee the possibility of America becoming involved in war was a topic. Up chirped Irvin Cobb in a tremolo from the midriff: "I've had my share. Anytime they ask me if I'll have war I just take a cigar to smoke after dinner."

Nor should the simile of a venerable colored fellow, who served the sarsparilla, go unrecorded. He was ploitering among his liquid mixtures when someone opened a nearby door and commented upon the pitch darkness in the hall. "Yessah," he affirmed, "jes' lak an iron safe."

A letter today brought the droning rumbumble of back home to the quick clatter of a New York apartment. In part it announced: "Our town has changed but little since barefoot we drove cows from pasture. The beautiful hills surround us, a trifle inferior to the Rockies perhaps but expressing a grim grandeur. Our citizenry remains chaste save for the usual and sporadic tilters of the gurgling jug. In a short while the show-boat will round the bend, the posters for the county fair will go up and winter will have turned its shadowy-corner."

Just Folks

The Way of Man

Time was he vowed he'd die for her;
Climb mountains gaunt and high for her;
Around the world he'd fly for her,
Devotion to express.
His cheeks turn flaming red at her,
Because she wants a dress.

"Have mercy on me, please!" he cries,
"Does money grow on trees?" he sighs,
And when her bills he sees, he'll rise
To call them most absurd.
Still if she bade him die for her,
Or round the wide world fly for her,
Or scale some mountain high for her,
He'd try to keep his word.

The promises once made to her,
The compliments he paid to her
May seem worn out and frayed to her.
Those death defying tasks
Which years ago he vowed to do,
And begged to be allowed to do,
And said that he'd be proud to do,
Are risks she never asks.

Strange man who at her beck and call
Would gladly risk his neck and all,
But asked to write a check, though small,
For hats and coats and beads,
Prefers to go through fire for her,
And prove his deep desire for her
By feats she never needs.

What the Hearst Papers Advocate No. 7 Federal sales tax and excise taxes to replace the income tax, which has degenerated into a racket.

Tax Revolt Revives Spirit Of Know Nothing Party

The recent tax revolt in the House of Representatives suggested the revival of a Know Nothing movement in American politics.

When the manufacturers' sales tax comes up before the House for a vote the balloting will not be on a lineup between the rich and the poor, as political demagogues indicate, but between knowledge and ignorance.

The opponents of the economically sound plan for a sales tax, modelled after the successful system in vogue in Canada, have suggested a purported alternative, which would cater to ignorance and prejudice, but would NOT PRODUCE SUFFICIENT REVENUES.

The 65 per cent surtax on maximum incomes sounds to the uninformed like a method for "soaking the rich," but in reality the nimble rich could avoid the tax legally by purchase of tax-exempt municipal and State bonds, through the acquisition of non-dividend paying common stocks, through offsetting current income with capital losses, and through living on uninvested capital.

With the United States facing a national emergency comparable to a wartime crisis, democracy is on trial.

Unless our lawmakers are guided by demonstrable facts and sound economic principles public credit will be seriously damaged.

The insufficiency of Federal revenue is a direct result of the drying up of the fountains and springs of business profits from which taxable income is derived.

Revenue is not augmented by the folly of raising the tax rates on profitless industry.

On the other hand, the Government can collect stable revenues in times of prosperity and depression by taxing business transactions, which continue even in emergency periods when profits are almost extinguished.

The worst of all possible tax schemes for the poor would be one that discourages enterprise and initiative and prolongs the nightmare of unemployment.

At this time the test of liberalism and progressivism consists of a willingness to pursue the leadership of facts in the public interest.

Fruit of the Tree

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Boston Evening American.

THE IDEA that the tax bill to meet the most appalling peace-time deficit in American history would speedily be enacted has gone glimmering. In view of the startling revelations of the conditions that have crowned twelve years of the present regime in power, even so robust a partisan as Vice-President Curtis might well refrain from optimistic statements for a while. We have a two-billion-dollar deficit confronting us; and it was announced in the House last week that the government of the United States is running behind more than $7,000,000 a day—day after day.

The United States as a nation is facing a very grave crisis. It may be found inadvisable to attempt to balance the budget in one year.

This tragic state of affairs has come upon us during the complete domination of the party of Mr. Hoover. It was in control of the House where for years there was a merciless use of the steam roller. It was in control of the Senate. It had the presidency. There is the responsibility. It is a responsibility that cannot be met with smug complacency by the Administration forces. This three-year panic is a Hoover panic.

Anything Can Happen If People Lose Faith

Last week in the House the members of both parties broke loose from the leadership of both parties, and things were said on the floor that one does not often hear except in revolutionary days.

The revolt expressed itself in bitter demands that the rich be made to pay until it hurts. Wartime taxes were voted. A tax of 65 per cent on large incomes in days of peace is one of the fruits of a regime of market-minded-statesmanship, with no concept of popular psychology, no contacts with the men in the street, no interest in the average man. The long prevalence of the state of feeling expressed last week would mean, in the end, legislation to limit private fortunes through taxation.

We are expressing no opinion here. We are trying to explain a state of feeling. Every one in America has been hard hit through the bursting of the purely artificial, unwholesome G. O. P. Bubble. This has been accentuated by Administration policies that violate the laws of economic common sense. Banks have failed as never before in history; long-established business houses have gone into bankruptcy; exporters and importers have been ruined, and the office buildings in great ports like New York City are being drained of tenants; railroads have been threatened with receiverships; factories, that have not cooled their furnaces, have moved to other countries to give employment to foreign workers.

This is serious, and the Administration refuses even to consider changing the tariff act, which is collecting a terrible toll.

But Government has interested itself actively in the plight of the banks and the railroads and private industries—that are big. Money from the Treasury has been put at the service of the powerful. Two billion dollars are at the disposal of these. They are being distributed—secretly.

Wrong? No, we think all this was necessary to prevent a dreadful collapse.

* * *

Man in the Street Should Be Questioned

But—there are more than 8,000,000 breadwinners refused the right to work who are being driven every day to bitterness, and probably 40,000,000 others, including dependents, who have grown cynical in their misery, and among the masses of the people the failure of a great business enterprise is no more appalling than the daily eviction of women and children because of non-payment of rent.

And nothing has been done for this group of victims of the ineptitudes of Government and the gluttony of the few. Government actually throws out its chest and makes a virtue of its refusal to let a penny from the Treasury, that offers two billion to the powerful, go to the feeding of the poor. And it refuses to consider a prosperity loan to create work on public improvements—when in the vicious circle we are in, there is no other way to creat a job. Now, if Government thinks the masses of the people are not thinking along this line, it would do well to stop the first dozen ordinary men on the street and engage them in conversation.
